French Fleet Gathering In Morocco To Fight On

Many Ships Seen At Casablanca Port; B. E. F., Navy Raid Nazi Coast Bases

Britain Strikes Back

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), June 27.—Britons were cheered today by reports from Gibraltar that powerful units of the French fleet—perhaps the greater part of it—have steamed to North African ports for a "fight to the finish" despite the Petain government's armistice.

They received the news as they fought off another of the German pre-dawn raids fast becoming a nightly circumstance of British life. The raids, from Southeastern England to Northern Scotland, were the sixth in nine days.

Two German bombers were shot down, the air ministry announced, adding that reports indicated no serious damage, and only "slight" casualties.

The last Nazi foray caused six deaths, bringing the total for the nine attacks to 27. The British, who repaid the German raids with attacks on military bases in Germany and the Netherlands, downed five of the enemy raiders last night.

From Gibraltar it was reliably reported that French warships and fighting planes of the west Mediterranean command left the Strait to rendezvous in Casablanca harbor, on the Atlantic coast of French Morocco.

Commander Would Fight

There Gen. Auguste Nogues, French North African commander, has declared: "We'll fight it out" despite the Bordeaux government's surrender.

Commanders of the French warships were reported to have assured Gen. Nogues they would back up his pledge.

[A United Press dispatch from Madrid, however, said a Casablanca dispatch reported Gen. Nogues had forwarded to all French commanders in Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia a message from War Minister Gen.

'Were Not Lucky,' Poilus Are Told

London, June 26 (AP).—The Swiss radio said tonight Gen. Maxime Weygand had issued an order of the day to the French Army, saying:

"After numerous and continuous battles you have received the order to cease fighting. Although we were not lucky, you have fought bravely. . .

"France's honor is untouched. The fulfillment of your duties may give you confidence in the fate of France, which has suffered in past centuries.

"Be faithful and united. Your sacrifice will not be in vain."

Nazis Report Secret British Peace Move

Story Is Broadcast To This Hemisphere By Special Station

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 26.—Destruction of the British Empire was predicted anew tonight by the German press, but first, said D. N. B., official news agency, will come a "thousandfold" counter blow for nightly British air raids on Germany.

The German short-wave news commentator in a program directed to the Western Hemisphere tonight asserted England is making discreet efforts to get in communication with the axis powers.

An authorized spokesman would make no comment or discuss the radio's source of information.

The radio announcer said: "In spite of the proverbial optimism of Mr. Churchill and his colleagues, the British are making well-camouflaged attempts to get in touch with

License Plate Checks Bounce; So Will Licenses

A "substantial number" of District motorists face prosecution and loss of driving privileges for reportedly giving worthless checks for automobile license plates, it was learned last night.

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal today will receive a list of names of all suspected persons and has been instructed to prepare legal action.

Tax Collector Chatham Towers said last night he "wasn't sure" of the exact number of tags involved nor the amount of money lost.

"But the number of suspects is substantial and the amount we lost on the worthless checks is equally substantial," he said.

Seal said the first step will be to revoke the licenses of those accused.

Girl Raid Wardens Assist in Birth

London (Thursday), June 27 (AP). Two girl air raid wardens served impromptu as doctor and nurse at the birth of a baby Wednesday night in a shelter while sirens screamed an air raid warning.

"The girls were wonderful," said the baby's grandmother, "and my daughter was a brick. We will be satisfied if future raids bring nothing worse."

U. S. Will Buy Huge Stores Of Rubber, Tin

RFC Gets Power To Form Companies To Purchase Materials

Huge defense supplies of rubber and tin are to be purchased and stored by the United States. Negotiations for these vital materials began last night.

Defense expansion developments yesterday were:

President Roosevelt signed legislation giving the RFC broad powers in creating separate companies to purchase strategic materials and to purchase the capital stock of any concern which might be directly involved with the Nation's defenses.

Willkie Best Vote-Getter, Chiefs Admit

But They Can't Get Used to Idea Of Accepting Former Democrat

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 26.—A canvass of G. O. P. leaders late tonight indicated that Senator Robert A. Taft was the leading candidate for the Republican nomination for President.

The Ohioan, it appeared, had been promised a number of unpledged delegations on second, third or later ballots.

With balloting scheduled to start tomorrow, Wendell Willkie was rushing ahead like a flame-throwing tank, but old hands at the political game were busy laying mines under his path. And in this endeavor they were freely using the name of Herbert Hoover, perhaps with his consent, perhaps without it.

The truth is, the Republican Party is in a horrible dilemma. Party leaders—at least, most of them—admit that Willkie probably would run a better race than Taft, and yet they can't get used to the idea of accepting a dark horse who was a Democrat until 1936.

Haunted by Popular Clamor

What haunts them, as they see the popular clamor for Willkie increasing, is the talk heard on all sides that if they spurn Willkie they will lose all chance of winning in November.

Tonight's session of the convention demonstrated what observers have known from the outset—that Willkie has nowhere near the votes he needs to win the nomination.

His only chance is to crash through if Taft and Dewey begin slipping.

The demonstration on the convention floor that followed the offering of Willkie's name—a demonstration marked by near fights and battles for standards—was not to be compared with the demonstration for Taft and Dewey.

Galleries Demand Willkie

Judged by the conduct of the delegates—a great majority of whom held their seats when Willkie's name was mentioned and many of whom booed—Willkie was as good as beaten.

Conversely, if the noise made by the people in the galleries was a criterion, he was as good as in the White House.

"We want Willkie! We want Willkie!"

Thus "the people" chanted and continued to chant long after Chairman Joe Martin had gaveled for order.

This phenomenon, a reflection of the Willkie sentiment that has been rising all over the country, had many a delegate pondering deeply as he left the convention hall.

G. O. P. leaders trying to stop Willkie sought to enlist the aid of

Offers Aid In Struggle For Liberty

Plank Restricts Help to Legal Means; Makes G. O. P. Peace Party, Fish Asserts

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 26.—A platform dominated by a plank opposing American involvement in "foreign war" while indorsing limited aid to "all peoples fighting for liberty" was adopted by the Republican National Convention this afternoon without a dissenting voice.

In a surprise plank, the platform urges a constitutional amendment to limit the Presidency to two terms "to insure against the overthrow of our American system of government."

Bitterly Contested

Bitterly contested in committee almost to the moment it was presented to the convention, the foreign affairs plank is a compromise between the views of the extreme isolationist and the "help Great Britain" factions, and is so written that—in the words of former Governor Alf M. Landon—"the candidate can interpret it in the light of world events."

Though they did not get everything they wanted, the isolationists had the upper hand in writing the plank, and Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, told the convention that it "puts the Republican Party before the American people as the peace party and puts the Democratic Party before the people as the party of intervention and war." None rose to dispute him.

Anti-War Faction Reassured

And C. Wayland Brooks, Illinois Senatorial nominee who had been fighting up to this afternoon for even stronger antiwar language than the plank contains, seconded its adoption because he had been "assured" that the "spirit and philosophy" of his proposal were included in the platform.

Savagely critical of "our unpreparedness" under the New Deal, the Republicans denounced "explosive utterances by the President directed at other governments which serve to imperil our peace." The plank condemns "all executive acts and proceedings which might lead to war without the authorization of the Congress of the United States."

The Administration attempted "to send our Congress home during the world's most tragic hour, so that we

2 Hurt in Crash Of Fire Engine And Taxicab

A fireman and cab driver were hurt yesterday when the taxi, according to police, crashed against Number 4 Engine Company apparatus at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The fire truck was responding to a rubbish blaze at the site of the New District Building.

Leon T. Glatfelter, 39, of 5758 Georgia avenue northwest, driver of the cab, and Caesar Young, 45, of 1910 Fifth street northwest, required hospital treatment. Glatfelter was charged with failure to give the fire engine right of way.

U. S. Dispatches 3 Warships To South American West Coast

The United States yesterday dispatched three more Navy ships to South American waters—this time to the Pacific side of the southern continent.

The word came coincidentally with a rumor, unconfirmed officially, that a portion of the Fleet which left Hawaii mysteriously Monday is heading for the South Pacific off the coast of Chile while the rest will proceed to the Panama Canal area.

It was the first time the West Coast of South America had been selected for any of the current series of "goodwill visits" by naval craft.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Compton announced here that the light cruiser Phoenix had been ordered to Valparaiso, Chile.

A few hours later a dispatch from Panama City, brought by the Associated Press, said the gunboat Erie will leave tomorrow for Guayaquil, Ecuador, bearing Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, jr., commander of the special service squadron to which the ship is attached. On Saturday, the U. S. survey ship Bushnell will leave Panama "to survey the Ecuadorean coast," the dispatch said.

Already the United States has the heavy cruiser Quincy at Montevideo, Uruguay, sent there following reports of "fifth column" activities in that country. The heavy cruiser Wichita also was sent south behind the Quincy and now is at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, with indications that it also is to be sent to the Uruguayan capital.

Snite Must Spend Life in Iron Lung

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—An eminent orthopedist disclosed today that Frederick Snite, jr., the valiant young man in the "iron lung," must spend the rest of his life in a respirator—and knows it.

Only a miracle, this doctor said, could restore the power of breathing to the 30-year-old Chicagoan.

Having lived by artificial respiration longer than any person in medical history, having been married last August, and having announced that he expected to become a father this September, young Snite has attracted international interest.

Platform Highlights . . .

Philadelphia, June 26 (AP).—The following are highlights of the Republican platform as prepared by the national convention's resolutions committee:

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY STANDS for Americanism, preparedness and peace. No foreign war. An Army and Navy so strong that no unfriendly power can successfully attack America or its essential outposts.

NATIONAL DEFENSE IS VITAL to our existence as a nation of free people. A free economy is necessary in war as in peace. People of the United States feel and express a sympathetic interest in all oppressed peoples everywhere who are struggling to establish or maintain their homes and their liberties. Upon this foundation we pledge ourselves to carry out the following:

1. IDLE MEN, IDLE CAPITAL, and idle farms will be put to work to create new wealth and profits insuring stable government and greater purchasing power among all our people.
2. LOCAL CONTROL OF UNEMPLOYMENT relief with Federal grants on the basis of greatest need, thus wiping out waste and politics and placing a larger share of the relief dollar in the hands of the man on relief. No one to go cold and hungry in America.
3. INCREASED SECURITY FOR THE AGED and a real chance and a real job for those in early life who have been forgotten.
4. SOUND COLLECTIVE BARGAINING. Teamwork between employer and employe and protection of the rights of labor.
5. FAIRNESS TO ALL AGRICULTURAL producers. American markets for the American farmer, with provision for soil conservation, reclamation and sound rural credit.
6. A TARIFF POLICY, SCIENTIFICALLY devised, which will protect American labor, industry and agriculture.
7. SOUND MONEY WITH CONTROL of the currency vested in Congress, as provided in the Constitution.
8. CONSERVATION OF THE PUBLIC CREDIT and economy in governmental expenditures without sacrificing the needs of the people.
9. GOVERNMENT JOBS ON THE BASIS of merit and not through political influence.
10. EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY in the industrial and political life of the Nation, regardless of race, color or creed.
11. NO THIRD TERM FOR any President.

Willkie Men Accused of Packing Hall With Private Tickets

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 26.—Charges were made at Convention Hall tonight that the great auditorium was "packed" with Wendell Willkie supporters by means of a special ticket issue.

Col. R. B. Creager, national committeeman from Texas and Senator Taft's floor manager, said he would take whatever action he found was possible. Other Republican leaders like Senator Lodge of Massachusetts expressed the opinion that nothing more could be done than "give the thing an airing in the press to let people know about it." Col. Creager said:

"I showed one of the tickets to John D. Hamilton, national committee chairman, and he told me he knew of no such issue. Then I asked Sam Pryor (Connecticut national committeeman and chairman of the admissions committee who is a Willkie supporter) and he acknowledged having them printed. He said he did so because he thought there would be especially large crowds tonight. I say he had them printed in the interest of Willkie. None of them were turned over to anyone but Willkie supporters. I told Pryor he'd hear from this.

The extra tickets were marked "special admission" and were good only for tonight's session, during which nominating speeches were made for most of the major candidates, including Willkie. Some late comers found their seats already occupied when they arrived at the hall.

Best Noise Makers Are Vocal Cords

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 26.—The trend in convention noise makers is all in favor of the human voice this year.

Any fears that the will of the people would be made known with mechanized equipment were completely routed here tonight as 1,000 delegates and 15,000 spectators turned loose their lung power in Philadelphia's vast convention hall.

The nomination speeches were mere interruptions in a shattering sequence of plain, old-fashioned yelling and booing.

Taft forces, it is true, operated an automobile horn, minus the automobile toward the end of the 22-minute demonstration in favor of their man. Hand-powered clackers and bells were heard from time to time. Kazoos and miniature trumpets were flour-

Doctor Orders Hazen to Take Month's Rest

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen again will leave his District Building desk for "at least a month" under orders from his physician, it was learned last night.

He has been instructed, it was further learned, to take a complete rest and clear his mind of all worries connected with running the District government.

Hazen returned to the District Building less than two weeks ago after an absence of nearly three months—a portion of which he spent in Doctors' Hospital.

Television Wins Feminine Vote

A Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, June 26.—One of the chief forms of feminine entertainment at this convention is "appearing on television."

Two companies are busy rounding up women to be interviewed, and are offering free advice on television clothes on the side.

It may sound funny in 1980, but the thought of being seen 200 miles is furnishing a big thrill.

Off the face hats, black and white or dark blue and white dresses make the best television showing. Gay red hats fade away to gray and checked coats look terrible.

In Nomination

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 26.—All of the pent-up sentiment for and against Wendell L. Willkie burst forth tonight in Convention Hall here as the names of the three leading candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination were laid before the G. O. P. delegates.

Deep-throated cheers that drowned out the boos, fights for possession of State standards, and 21 minutes of sustained demonstration followed Willkie's nomination by Representative Charles Halleck, of Indiana.

Balloting Starts Today

By the stop-watch the Hoosier's show lasted somewhere between the time record hung up by parading supporters of Thomas E. Dewey and balloon-showered backers of Senator Taft. But for ear-shattering spontaneous noise and the hot clash of emotions, tonight's demonstration set this convention's mark and followed the pattern of the challenging Hoosier's remarkable campaign ascent.

Weary delegates knuckled down to the business they are here for—nominating a candidate—after succeeding at last in unfurling a "peace" standard over a compromise platform ten days in the making.

Bedlam Breaks Out

After adopting a platform, they proceeded tonight to place in nomination four of the round dozen names that have been dropped into the delegate grab bag before they return here tomorrow to finish the preliminaries and get down to the job that will tell the story—ballots.

Submitted to the convention were the nominations of Dewey, Frank Gannett, Taft and Willkie, in that order, as States alphabetically high on the roll call yielded to sponsors of the first three aspirants.

Dewey's candidacy, proposed to the delegates by New York's John

STAR-SPANGLED VAUDEVILLE PLAGIARISM: Since the convention began I've been troubled by a vaguely familiar flavor. It reminded me of something else. Now it has just dawned on me: Helzapoppin. Olsen & Johnson must have swiped the idea from a convention. Or vice-versa.

Harlan Miller

NEEDS IMMERSION: After a few hours of the bellowing bushwah and the pious demagoging, a man's natural instinct is to make from the hall for the ocean 60 miles away at a lope, wade in up to his chin, and stand there for an hour or so, waiting for antiseptic cleansing by the salt water. It helps to duck under and make gurgling noises, too. (Or an alcohol rub might cure that itchy twitch.)

* * * *

OUT OF A HAT: Confab at the hot dog stand:

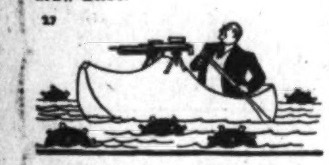
"Why don't they put the names of experienced men in a hat and just nominate by drawing lots?

"Yeah, just men who've had experience. Been both Governor and in Congress."

* * * *

"'Sa good idea. The Republicans might get some guy like Tobey, of New Hampshire that way, if they're lucky."

"Yeah. And the Democrats might draw Bilbo."



"—did Van take the plunge?"

VAN'S EVOLUTION: Quite a few are mystified by Senator Vandenberg's present status—isolationist, noninterventionist, nonbelligerent, short-of-warrior, or just in a state of flux? As summed up in an over-the-beer analysis:

* * * *

"Arthur started to load his musket and then the cartridge got jammed." "That's right. Van dived in like a man taking a bath in a washbowl."

* * * *

GLAMORMAN: Lady delegates are so unstrung about Wendell Willkie that even if he isn't nominated or elected or anything they're apt to leave their lights burning all night just to help his utilities.

* * * *

FIGHTING BOB: Some of the delegates are getting a lot of comfort from Senator Taft's foreign policy. Taft seems to favor militant indecision.

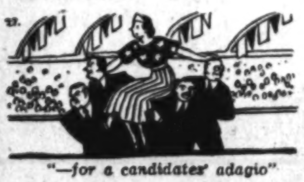
LOST 1,000,000: I got up early to make a pilgrimage to Valley Forge, out in the suburbs, before breakfast. It dawned on me that the G. O. P. could have picked up a million or two extra votes by doing their nominating out there.

* * * *

INCENSE CHAMBER: Some of the more psychic observers here have a hunch that a room is already being filled with smoke over at the Union League Club to have it ready so the nomination can be arranged in the proper ceremonial atmosphere without bothering the innocent delegates.



"—for a candidates' adagio"

SUBSTITUTE BALLET: Instead of the WPA ballet to open the convention, which some of the G. O. P. stalwarts found slightly offensive, Mr. Hamilton might have substituted a ballet of candidates tossing Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, around at some peril to her limbs.

But if she were a healthy, uninhibited girl she might swoon 'n Wendell's arms.

* * * *

CABOT CAUTION: Senator Lodge has discreetly muffled his sound suggestion to limit nomination speeches to two minutes. The idea won applause. But it might have wounded some orators into making two-hour speeches against him in 1944 or 1948.

* * * *

MENTAL ACCIDENTS: Against a background of well-fed, plush-lined, heavily upholstered politicians Tom Dewey always reminds me of Joan of Arc . . . In a white peruke Vandenberg's the one to remind the voters of G. Washington. . . .

Hoover gives listeners the guilty feeling of having snowballed him by mistake . . . Cuff note on Joe Martin: I never saw a wistfuller face than a dark horse's in repose.

* * * *

Census Bureau Speeds Data Believed Vital to Defense

These Statistics Will Be the First To Be Turned Out

By Edward Ryan

Speedier Collection of information believed important in the national defense program has been ordered by the Census Bureau, officials said yesterday.

Dr. Vergil D. Reed, Assistant Director of the Census, said that original plans for handling the census returns have been shifted around to make sure that the first statistics turned out will be the ones which can be used by defense planners and business in the emergency.

Material Separated

The Bureau, he said, has already weeded out from thousands of manufacturing and business reports, the returns on 37 "key" industries. his material is being kept separate, and from it, Reed said, finished statistics can be produced to fill inquiries from the National Defense Commission on two-hour notice.

Without an emergency, he said, needed information, now ready to be tapped in a couple of hours, would have gone through the census mill with the rest of the returns, and much of it might have remained buried into the winter.

Like the business census, Reed said, the returns for population, housing, and agriculture, will be "rerouted" to make sure that information likely to be helpful in the defense program will be produced first. This rerouting is not expected to reduce the time needed—about three years—for getting the census returns in book form; it means writing first the chapters connected with defense plans.

McClure Aids Defense Unit

Along with its plans for speeding defense statistics, the Bureau is preparing to begin next week boosting its working force toward a peak of 6,500 to 7,000 employes.

Howard McClure, assistant to Reed, has been assigned to liaison work with the Defense Commision. He will be on the staff of Stacy May, chief of the commission's research and statistics section.

Besides boosting production of defense statistics, the Bureau is planning to start next month increasing its work force to a peak of 6,500 to 7000 employes. The present staff is about 2,600.

Early in July, editing and coding work will go into two eight-hour shifts a day, and in eight weeks the present day crew of editors and coders will be increased from 1,200 persons to 1,600, and the night shift will be built up to the same size.

The 2,000 jobs are to be filled from Civil Service lists and, in addition about 2,500 card punch operators will be put to work. Examinations for the latter jobs, paying $1,260, have been opened by the Civil Service Commission.

Calendar: A radio show, and songs by the Federal Playhouse Chorus, will be presented at the Agriculture Auditorium at 8 p. m. today. The entertainment is sponsored by the Agriculture Branch of the NFFE . . . "This Might Be You," a new radio program sponsored by the Labor Department, will be presented over Mutual Broadcasting stations at 1 p. m. Saturdays, starting July 6.

Jobs. Civil Service examinations have been opened for these positions:

Chief medical officer, $6,500 a year, to be chief of the Civil Service Commission's medical division. Construction inspection coordinator, $3,800 a year, Maritime Commission. Instructor for Army Air Corps Technical schools, four grades of jobs with paying ranging from $2,000 to $3,800; aeronautical engineer, $3,800; associate, $3,200; assistant, $2,600. Mechanical engineer with experience in industrial production, $3,800; associate, $3,200; assistant, $2,600; for the War and Navy Departments. Associate aeronautical inspector, $3,500; assistant, $3,200; Civil Aeronautics Authority. Graduate nurse for service at Panama Canal, $168.75 a month. Junior farmer, $2,000, Bureau of Prisons. Sound recording technician, $2,600, War Department Signal Service. Motor transport service manager, $2,600, War Department. Interior decorator, $3,800; senior, $4,600; associate, $3,200; Maritime Commission. Rural sociologist, four grades with salaries from $2,600 to $4,600, Agriculture Department. Junior communications operator with experience in high speed equipment, $1,620. War Department, Engineman, $7.29 to $8.25 a day; aircraft mechanic, $7.48 to $8.44; machinist, $7.48 to $8.44, and boatbuilder, $7.39 to $8.35, all at Norfolk Navy Yard. Head cook at the Veterans' Administration Facility here $1,620.

Week's Power Output Shows Minor Decline

New York, June 26 (AP).—Electric power output declined to 2,508,825,000 kilowatt hours during the week ended June 22 from 2,516,208,000 in the preceding week, a dip of .3 of 1 per cent, the Edison Electric Institute said today.

Latest production, however, was 9.8 per cent ahead of 2,285,083,000 kilowatt hours a year ago. The contraction from the previous week was contrary to seasonal expectations.

District Bar Honors Freeman For 40 Years With Library

Association Official Given Gold Watch As Attorneys and Members of Judiciary Gather to Offer Their Felicitations

Elphonse W. Freeman, 56, librarian of the District Bar Association, was presented a gold watch by the association yesterday in appreciation of his 40 years' continuous service.

Plans for the presentation had been kept from the librarian, so that he was puzzled when more than 50 prominent attorneys, officials and members of the judiciary filed into the library in the District courthouse for the occasion.

George E. McNeill, chairman of the association's library committee, reminded the audience that the library is the bar association's most valuable asset (the worth of the collection is estimated at more than $100,000) and that for many years it has been under "Alphonzo's" care.

"Alphonzo" is Freeman's nickname.

"Perhaps nobody here except myself," said McNeil, "has called upon 'Alphonzo' for help on some knotty problem of law. But I can assure you that the lawyers who have been assisted by his learning are numbered by the hundreds."

Among those who have congratulated Freeman in an informal reception after the presentation, were Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the Bar Association; former president Sefton Darr, and Godfrey L. Munter, Justices James M. Proctor and David A. Pine, Attorneys Austin F. Canfield, Charles V. Imlay, William E. Richardson, William E. Leahy, Walter English, and Daniel W. O'Donoghue, jr.

Born here in 1884 on the birthday of Gen. Washington, after whom he was given his middle name, Freeman attended grade schools and in 1899 completed a business course at the old Douglas School, First and Pierce streets northwest.

While yet a schoolboy, Freeman was one of a crew employed to salvage the books and files of the Supreme Court, following the explosion and fire of 1898. He became a messenger in the bar association's library in 1900 and was made assistant librarian ten years later. He became librarian in 1927.

Buy Your Coal Now, Consumers' Counsel Advises

Buy your fall and winter's supply of coal now.

This is the official advice issued yesterday by the Consumers' Counsel Division of the Interior Department.

Early buying of your coal supply, the counsel said, will lighten the load that may fall on the Nation's transport system when the Nation's defense program gets under way in a few months.

The counsel wants to avoid a recurrence of the coal shortages that left many American homes unheated in the war drive of 1917-18.

Coal prices are steady, the counsel said, but might become "firmer" when large scale production of planes, tanks, guns, chemicals, battleships and other war materials gets under way.

Langer Defeats Sen. Frazier In G. O. P. Race

Former Governor Of North Dakota To Oppose Vogel

Fargo, N. Dak., June 26 (AP).—William Langer, twice Governor of North Dakota, won the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator over the incumbent, Lynn J. Frazier, who has served in that post for 18 years, and State Senator Thomas Whelan with late tabulations tonight of Tuesday's primary election giving him an increasing plurality.

Langer had 51,217 votes to 42,523 for Frazier and 38,061 for Whelan in 1,852 of 2,257 precincts counted.

Langer will meet Charles Vogel of Fargo, who easily won the Democratic nomination, in the general election this fall. North Dakota has never elected a Democratic Senator.

Lewis T. Orlady, of Jamestown, Republican coalition candidate for Governor, conceded his defeat to Lieut. Gov. Jack Patterson, of Minot, Nonpartisan League candidate.

Langer, center of many bitter fights in the last eight years, most of which time he controlled the Nonpartisan League, trailed in third place until more than a third of the count had been received, but at that point he slipped into a scant lead and continued to increase it.

Senator Frazier, seeking reelection to the post he held for 18 consecutive years, led only for a brief time in the early stages, with Whelan generally in front until Langer came up. Frazier campaigned independently, while Whelan received the support of a coalition group of regular Republicans and dissatisfied Leaguers.

Congressmen William Lemke and Usher L. Burdick, both seeking renomination increased their leads over Secretary of State James D. Gronna and former Gov. Walter Welford. Lemke was indorsed but did not cooperate with the coalition group while Burdick and Gronna received League support and Welford was a coalition candidate.

Democratic Gov. John Moses was easily nominated for reelection over C. P. Stone of Fargo. Charles Vogel, of Fargo, convention-indorsed candidate, held a substantial lead over E. A. Johansson, of Raub, for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Langer, Nonpartisan League indorsee, served two terms as Governor, his last ending in 1938. He was convicted in 1934 on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct operation of a Federal law after authorities charged him with levying upon public employes receiving their pay from Federal funds to contribute to a political newspaper. He appealed and his second trial ended in disagreement, but he was acquitted at his third trial.

He served from 1916 to 1920 as attorney general and was defeated by Frazier in 1920 for Governor. He was elected Governor in 1932 and was removed by the State supreme court in 1934 following his conviction. He was reelected Governor in a three-way fight in 1936.

Langer was defeated in 1938 by Senator Gerald P. Nye with Langer running as an independent.

Employment Million Ahead Of Last Year

Secretary Perkins Declines to Discuss Report She Will Quit

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday described a million-man increase in industrial jobs, but declined to discuss a report that she planned to leave her own.

As a result of defense work and seasonal business gains, Secretary Perkins said, nonagricultural jobs had increased 240,000 between April 15 and May 15, sending the level of employment about 1,000,000 above the same period last year.

She said there had been a great expansion in war materials industries—aircraft tripled over 1937; 50 per cent increase in the engine industry; and other large increases in shipbuilding, machine tools, aluminum and explosives manufacture.

The secretary said she had not heard that she plans to resign, but when asked about the recent reportedly forced resignation of Secretary of War Woodring, she remarked "I generally know what I am doing."

Among the employment gains, Miss Perkins said, the construction industries, public and private, added 130,000 men to their payrolls in May, and wholesale and retail stores took on 60,000 workers. Factories in the textile, apparel, and automobile industries laid off about 50,000 men, a decline of 0.6 per cent, but their payrolls went up 0.1 per cent.

The increase of 1,000,000 employes since a year ago, it was said, meant a 3 per cent increase in employment, but payrolls during the period rose 12 per cent.

G. O. P. Promises To Extend Civil Service

A Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, June 26.—A promise to "reestablish in the Federal civil service a real merit system and extend it to all nonpolicy-forming positions," was included in the Republican platform adopted today. The party pledged to set up a merit system "on a truly competitive basis."

The same plank contained a paragraph promising laws standardizing and simplifying quasijudicial and administrative agencies to insure adequate notice and hearing, impartiality, adherence to the rules of evidence and full judicial review of all questions of law and fact. No specific reference, however, was made to the Walter-Logan bill pending in Congress.

The Constitutional system of "checks and balances" will form the basis of "all our policies affecting the organization of our republican form of Government," the plank declared.

Bomb Plot Rumor Stirs Convention

Philadelphia, June 26 (U.P.).—An unfounded rumor that some bombs had been discovered in the auditorium where the Republicans are holding their national convention upset convention managers and auditorium police tonight but caused no other damage.

Te report was published in a Philadelphia newspaper under an eight-column banner which said: "Foil Convention Bomb Plot."

Samuel F. Pryor, chairman of the convention committee on arrangements, was quickly assured by police, however, that there was nothing to the plot story.

Health Pageant to Be Held Tonight

The National Youth Health Pageant, featuring ballroom and folk dancing, will be held tonight at 8:30 in Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest. Proceeds will be turned over to the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind.

Mary was a magnet to men

Mary, Queen of Scots, drew men to her by an irresistible charm. At her feet were Frederick, King of Denmark; Eric, King of Sweden; the Earl of Arran; Darnley, Bothwell and others. For this Queen was a woman "with white skin and soft hair"—and the great gift of friendship.

The first makers of Highland Queen whisky named their forthright Scotch for Mary. That was long ago. But this Scotch is still faithful to its traditions—a comradely Scotch, light and delicate, yet retaining rare flavor and bouquet.

District Survey of Off-street Parking Facilities Planned

Study Will Cover Type and Number Of Places Needed

A city-wide survey of all possible off-street parking facilities, to be conducted jointly by the District government and Public Roads Administration, will begin within the next three weeks, it was learned last night.

The project is authorized in the 1941 Appropriations Act and will become part of the highway planning survey now under way, said Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Under the Appropriations Act, the Commissioners were directed to "make a thorough study to determine the most feasible program for providing parking facilities, other than on the public streets, for motor vehicles in the District of Columbia."

A working agreement on the project was completed yesterday by Capt. Whitehurst and officials of the Public Roads Administration.

Designed primarily to permit the full use of streets for moving traffic and eliminate congestion, the study will cover the type and number of off-street parking facilities needed, the proper location, probable cost and appropriate methods of financing the program.

The survey will take several months, Whitehurst said, and will extend to all areas of the city. It will include investigation of available off-street parking places, as well as possible sites for new and necessary facilities.

The report that part of the fleet that left Hawaii is to proceed to Chilean coastal waters was accompanied by the rumor, also unconfirmed, that Japanese ships had been engaged in unexplained maneuvers in that portion of the Pacific.

Oahu on War Basis

By International News Service

Honolulu, June 26.—With the main body of the United States Fleet speeding toward a secret destination, the island of Oahu, Uncle Sam's "Gibraltar of the Pacific," was placed on a wartime footing today.

All military forces on the island—site of Honolulu and Pearl Harbor, fleet base—were put on the "alert."

Manila Bookings Give Clew

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, June 26.—Reports by passenger line companies of an "abnormal number" of bookings for Manila led to speculation today that major units of the fleet, which put to sea Monday, might be bound for waters near the Philippine Islands.

Most of those booking passage requested earliest possible sailing dates. Presumably many of the reservations were made by the wives and families of naval officers, left behind by the unexpected departure of the fleet, but steamship companies were unable to determine the number.

(In San Diego, however, informed sources said they were certain the fleet was not en route to the Far East because many of the Navy oil tankers still were in southern California waters and because the scouting force under command of Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews had remained in the vicinity of Hawaii.

(They said if any force was sent to the Philippines the first to go would be the scouting force and not the battle fleet.

(A report which received the most credence in official San Diego quarters was that the fleet was engaging in maneuvers between the mainland and Hawaii and that it would be strengthened by units which sailed under sealed orders from California ports and Panama within the last 72 hours.)

Special Squadron Provisioned

Panama, June 26 (AP).—Units of a special service squadron on the Pacific end of the Panama Canal were said unofficially today to have been provisioned, probably in preparation for steaming out to meet the fleet.

Officially, the move was treated as a military secret, and one source said the squadron might be making ready simply for a regular visiting tour to Central and South American ports.

A. G. E. Output up 10%

The Utility Management Corporation reports that for the week ended June 21, net electric output of the Associated Gas and Electric group was 94,456,494 units (kwh). This is an increase of 8,776,006 units or 10.2 per cent above a year ago.

Five Rescued as Squall Capsizes Sailboat in Potomac

GOT A DUCKING—Jack Smith (left), of 6301 Eighth street northwest, and Ned Stehl, 1851 Wyoming avenue northwest, were rescued from the Potomac River yesterday when their racing sloop overturned in a squall

Occupants, Including Two Young Members Of D. C. Girls Swimming Team, Saved After Clinging to Craft 5 Minutes

Two youths and three girls were rescued from the Potomac yesterday when a squall capsized their racing sloop.

Picked up by a Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. launch after hanging on to their upset craft for about five minutes were Caroline Baber, 16, of Harvard Hall Apartments, 1650 Harvard street northwest; her sister, Bobbie, 19; their cousin, Sarah Hill, 17, of Germanton, N. C.; Jack Smith, 17, of 6301 Eighth street northwest, and Ned Stehl, 18, of 1851 Wyoming avenue northwest.

The 16-foot sailboat, the Bronco, bucked and finally turned turtle when a squall broke out at 6 p. m. near the Bellevue Dock, above Alexandria. All five are good swimmers, the Baber sisters having been members of the Central High School swimming team. The Baber girls and the two youths were graduated from Central a few days ago.

For the Smith boy, who owns the racer, it was the second ducking in two years. Three months after getting the craft, Jack was tossed into the Potomac during a heavy thundershower. Last week the Bronco won two second-place prizes in the Columbia Yacht Club regatta.

A 35-mile-an-hour wind cooled the Capital for most of the day yesterday, holding the temperature between 79 and 63 degrees. Slightly warmer temperatures with local showers are predicted for today and tomorrow, but the forecaster believes there will be no break in the month's dry spell. Yesterday's shower gave the city but .01 of an inch moisture.

D. C. Officials Ask Vacant Lots Use As Playgrounds

Property owners throughout the District yesterday were asked to donate use of vacant lots for conversion into play spots for vacationing school youngsters.

Under the city's summer campaign to protect children from traffic dangers, Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of recreation, announced plans to conduct a survey of all available properties which could be used for play purposes.

Area supervisors of the recreation division will canvass neighborhoods, reporting locations of vacant lots, little used alleys and other suitable properties.

Where vacant lots are found, it is planned to have WPA workers and members of the Traffic Advisory Council visit the owners to seek permission to use the lots free of charge.

Leche Acquitted Of Complicity In Overcharge

Ruston, La., June 26 (AP).—Former Gov. Richard W. Leche was acquitted tonight of State charges of complicity in a confidence game involving a $27,000 overcharge on a State college building.

Leche, who resigned as Governor of Louisiana a year ago today as huge State scandals broke, has appealed a 10-year Federal sentence for mail fraud imposed on him in Alexandria, La., earlier this month in connection with a $31,000 "kickback" commission on a truck sale to the State Highway Commission.

Tax Official Indicted

New Orleans, June 26 (AP).—An inquiry into political corruption in this city was promised tonight immediately after the Orleans Parish grand jury indicted Shirley Wimberly, Louisiana Tax Commission member, and eight other men in connection with "deadheading" on State pay rolls.

District Attorney J. Bernard Cocke declared:

"This is just the beginning. The grand jury meets again Tuesday. We are going to push our investigation thoroughly."

Catholic U. Oxford Scholar Studies For Degree in U. S.

Swarthmore, Pa., June 26 (AP).—Three thousand miles from their own school, six Oxford scholars dressed in the English university's traditional cap, gown and white tie, today began 10 days of final examinations for their degrees.

The European war, forcing the return of American students at Oxford, brought a relaxation of the university's rule that examinations must be held at Oxford. They are being held at Swarthmore College under the direction of Dr. Frank Aydelotte, retiring president of Swarthmore and American secretary to the Rhodes Scholarship Trustees.

The students are Benson L. Timmins, 3d., graduate of the University of Georgia; Dana K. Bailey, University of Arizona; Gilmore Stott, Cincinnati University, and G. Fenwick Jones, Emory University, Georgia, all Rhodes scholars, and Francis X. Boyle, Catholic University, Washington, D. C., and Richard C. Boland, of Wayne, Pa., a Columbia University graduate.

Pepco Plans Power Boost For Defense

Company to Guard Against Sabotage At New Additions

The Potomac Electric Power Co. is preparing to meet any power demands that may arise from National defense preparations by doubling a 50,000 kilowatt expansion program already begun at its Buzzard Point plant, A. G. Neal, company president, announced yesterday.

At the same time, Neal disclosed, company officials are considering devices for protecting against sabotage the new additions to the plant which, by February, 1942, will house two new generating units with combined capacity of 100,000 kilowatts at a total cost of $8,000,000 for structures and equipment.

Neal said the protective equipment to be installed has not yet been decided upon, but that the new structures will be heavily fenced and that lights will be installed for illuminating the entire yard.

Boost Expansion

The program is a phase of construction projected for the next two years by the North American Co., of which Pepco is a subsidiary, which will boost by 50 per cent expansion originally scheduled at the start of this year.

E. L. Shea, president of North American, announced the plans in a letter to Gano Dunn and Leland Olds, members of a subcommittee on electric power problems assisting the National Defense Advisory Committe.

Shea announced the addition of 380,000 kilowatt generating capacity instead of the 270,000 originally contemplated and extensive additions to transmission distribution and other utility facilities. The new program, he said, will lift the company's construction budget to $90,000,000 from the $61,000,000 contemplated earlier.

"North American Co. and its operating companies," Shea said, "expect to meet with their own resources all of the obligations arising out of any national defense problems."

One Unit Under Way

One 50,000-kilowatt unit at Buzzard Point is now under construction and is expected to be in operation by October. The second unit is scheduled for completion by February, 1942.

"We now have ample facilities well in excess of maximum demands so far made upon us in the Washington area," Neal said, "and the additional generating unit now nearing completion will take care of the estimated normal growth and maintain an adequate power reserve.

"At the same time, we want to be absolutely certain that the National Capital will be adequately supplied with power in any emergency that may arise in the movement for national defense preparedness. We are, therefore, immediately placing orders for additional generating equipment to be installed in the Buzzard Point plant."

Completion of the expansion program will provide the company with a generating capacity of 390,000 kilowatts.

$9,400 Added To Red Cross War Aid Fund

District Quota Reached But Gifts Pour in; Total Now $316,000

Contributions to the American Red Cross' war relief fund continued yesterday to pour into headquarters of the District chapter, which reached its quota of $300,000 Monday.

The national campaign still had nearly $4,500,000 to go to realize its $20,000,000 goal.

The District's total stood at $316,563.82 last night after a day which brought in $9,402.06 of gifts. Workers continued their "clean-up" drive to collect several thousand more dollars still available.

In addition to Washington, only four cities with 100,000 or more population have reached their quota. Richmond, Va., is one of them.

Meanwhile, local Red Cross officials announced a group of campaign workers in uniform would be on hand at The Washington Post-sponsored double-header baseball game at Griffith Stadium Saturday afternoon, all receipts of which will go to the war relief fund.

The Heurich Brewers will meet The Post's all-schoolboy team in a hardball game, and the Senate Beer softballers will play Baratte's All-Stars in the other event.

Contributions received by the District chapter yesterday included a second gift of $892 from the Graduate Nurses' Association; $160.50 from Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. employes, bringing their total to $1,385 for 995 employes; and $2,074.02 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, an average of $1.65 per employe.

The District school teachers reported an additional $987.87 and District school pupils sent in an additional $495.16 for the National Children's Fund. An anonymous donor gave $2,500 to the children's fund.

Other gifts reported yesterday included the National Capital Insurance Co., $100; American Fire Insurance Co., $100; Firemen's Insurance Co., $143; Columbia National Bank, $250; Washington Loan and Trust Co., $750; War Department, $226.60; Metropolitan Police Department, $465.30; District Trees and Parking Division, $64; Panama Canal, $64, and National Research Council, $13.

High Schools Urged to Teach Citizenship

Reading Instruction Should Be Stressed Also Says Dr. Dodd

What this country needs are high schools that teach reading, citizenship and stamina, Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the National Youth Administration's educational program, declared last night at Catholic University.

With two-thirds of the population in secondary schools "because they haven't anywhere else to go," he told Catholic educators and nurses attending two days of conferences at the university, the educational needs of the "common man" are being neglected.

Dr. Judd said not academic or specialized subjects should be taught but reading, so the pupil can acquire information independently; real civics, such as the functions of the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Standards, and "that kind of stamina and ability to concentrate that was taught in the pioneer days."

Earlier sessions during the first day of conferences consisted of separate meetings for discussion of technical subjects by the educators and professional nurses from various parts of the Nation. Another dinner last night for chemistry teachers was addressed by Dr. Rudolf Allers.

Roosevelt Gets Gift of Stamps

President Roosevelt took time off yesterday to add a rich gift to his stamp collection.

Eighteen Latin American diplomats called on him to present a special collection of the postage stamps issued by 11 Americans republics in commemoration of the founding of the Pan American Union.

Secretary of State Hull, as chairman of the board, made the presentation and the President said he planned to place the collection in his Memorial Library at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Text of Republican Platform, Declaring 'the Emergency Demands a Change'

New Deal Fails America, G. O. P. Holds

Amendment Favored To Prohibit Third Terms for Presidents

Philadelphia, June 26.—The following is the text of the Republican platform as presented to the convention:

The Republican Party, in representative convention assembled, submits to the people of the United States the following Declaration of Its Principals and Purposes:

We state our general objectives in the simple and comprehensive words of the Preamble to the Constitution of the United States. Those objectives as there stated are these:

"To form a more perfect union; establish justice; insure domestic tranquility; provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our rosterity."

Meeting within the shadow of Independence Hall where those words were written we solemnly reaffirm them as a perfect statement of the ends for which we as a party propose to plan and to labor.

I

The record of the Roosevelt Administration is a record of failure to attain any one of those essential objectives.

Instead of leading us into more perfect union, the Administration has deliberately fanned the flames of class hatred.

Instead of the establishment of justice, the Administration has sought the subjection of the judiciary to executive discipline and domination.

Instead of insuring domestic tranquillity, the Administration has made impossible the normal friendly relations between employers and employes and has even succeeded in alienting both the great divisions of organized labor.

Instead of providing for the common defense, the Administration, notwithstanding the expenditure of billions of our dollars, has left the Nation unprepared to resist foreign attack.

Instead of promoting the general welfare, the Administration has domesticated the deficit, doubled the debt, imposed taxes where they do the greatest economic harm, and used public money for partisan political advantage.

Instead of the blessings of liberty, the Administration has imposed upon us a regime of regimentation which has deprived the individual of his freedom and has made of America a shackled giant.

II.

Wholly ignoring these great objectives as solemnly declared by the people of the United States, the New Deal Administration has for seven long years whirled in a turmoil of shifting, contradictory and overlapping administrations and policies. Confusion has reigned supreme. The only steady undeviating characteristic has been the relentless expansion of the power of the Federal Government over the every day life of the farmer, the industrial worker and the business man. The emergency demands organization—not confusion. It demands free and intelligent cooperation—not incompetent domination. It demands a change.

The New Deal Administration has failed America.

It has failed by seducing our people to become continuously dependent upon government, thus weakening their morale and quenching the traditional American spirit.

It has failed by viciously attacking our industrial system and sapping its strength and vigor.

It has failed by attempting to send our Congress home during the world's most tragic hour, so that we might be eased into the war by word or deed during the absence of our elected representatives from Washington.

Zero Hour Is Here

It has failed by disclosing military details of our equipment to foreign powers over protests by the heads of our armed defense.

It has failed by ignoring the lessons of fact concerning modern, mechanized armed defense.

In these and countless other ways the New Deal Administration has either deliberately deceived the American people or proved itself incompetent longer to handle the affairs of our Government.

The zero hour is here. America must prepare at once to defend our shores, our homes, our lives and our most cherished ideals.

To establish a first line of defense we must place in official positions men of faith who put America first and who are determined that her governmental and economic system be kept unimpaired.

Our national defense must be so strong that no unfriendly power shall ever set foot on American soil. To assure this strength our national economy, the true basis of America's defense, must be free of unwarranted government interference.

Only a strong and sufficiently prepared America can speak words of reassurance and hope to the liberty loving peoples of the world.

National Defenses.

The Republican Party is firmly opposed to involving this Nation in foreign war.

We are still suffering from the ill effects of the last World War—a war which cost us a $24,000,000,000 increase in our national debt, billions of uncollectable foreign debts, and the complete upset of our economic system, in addition to the loss of human life and irreparable damage to the health of thousands of our boys.

The present National Administration has already spent for all purposes more than $54,000,000,000—has boosted the national debt and current Federal taxes to an all-time high; and yet by the President's own admission we are still wholly unprepared to defend our country, its institutions and our individual liberties in a war that threatens to engulf the whole world; and this in spite of the fact that foreign wars have been in progress for two years or more and that military information concerning these wars and the rearmament programs of the warring nations has been at all times available to the National Administration through its diplomatic and other channels.

The Republican Party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace. We accordingly fasten upon the New Deal full responsibility for our unpreparedness and for the consequent danger of involvement in war.

Sympathies Profoundly Stirred by Invasions

We declare for the prompt, orderly, and realistic building of our national defense to the point at which we shall be able not only to defend the United States, its possessions, and essential outposts from foreign attack, but also efficiently to uphold in war the Monroe Doctrine. To this task the Republican Party pledges itself when entrusted with national authority.

In the meantime, we shall support all necessary and proper defense measures proposed by the Administration in its belated effort to make up for lost time; but we deplore explosive utterances by the President directed at other governments which serve to imperil our peace; and we condemn all Executive acts and proceedings which might lead to war without the authorization of the Congress of the United States.

Our sympathies have been profoundly stirred by invasion of unoffending countries and by disaster to nations whose ideals most closely resemble our own. We favor the extension to all peoples fighting for liberty, or whose liberty is threatened, of such aid as shall not be in violation of international law or inconsistent with the requirements of our own national defense.

We believe that the spirit which should animate our entire defensive policy is determination to preserve not our material interests merely, but those liberties which are the priceless heritage of America.

Reemployment.

The New Deal's failure to solve the problem of unemployment and revive opportunity for our youth presents a major challenge to representative government and free enterprise. We propose to recreate opportunity for the youth of America and put our idle millions back to work in private industry, business and agriculture. We propose to eliminate needless administrative restrictions, thus restoring lost motion to the wheels of individual enterprise.

Relief.

We shall remove waste, discrimination, and politics from relief—through administration by the States with Federal grants-in-aid on a fair and nonpolitical basis, thus giving the man and woman on relief a larger share of the funds appropriated.

Social Security.

We favor the extension of necessary old age benefits on an earmarked pay-as-you-go basis to the extent that the revenues raised for this purpose will permit. We favor the extension of the unemployment compensation provisions of the Social Security Act, wherever practicable, to those groups and classes not now included. For such groups as may thus be covered we favor a system of unemployment compensation with experience rating provisions, aimed at protecting the worker in the regularity of his employment and providing adequate compensation for reasonable periods when that regularity of employment is interrupted. The administration should be left with the States with a minimum of Federal control.

Labor Relations.

The Republican Party has always protected the American worker.

We shall maintain labor's right of free organization and collective bargaining.

We believe that peace and prosperity at home require harmony, teamwork and understanding in all relations between worker and employer. When differences arise, they should be settled directly and voluntarily across the table.

Recent disclosures repspecting the administration of the National Labor Relations Act require that this act be amended in fairness to employer and all groups of employes so as to provide true freedom for, and orderliness in self-organization and collective bargaining.

Agriculture.

A prosperous and stable agriculture is the foundation of our economic structure. Its preservation is a national and nonpolitical social problem not yet solved, despite many attempts. The farmer is entitled to a profit price for his products. The Republican Party will put into effect such governmental policies, temporary and permanent, as will establish and maintain an equitable balance between labor, industry and agriculture by expending industrial and business activity, eliminating unemployment, lowering production costs, thereby creating increased consumer buying power for agricultural products.

Until this balance has been attained, we propose to provide benefit payments, based upon a widely applied, constructive soil-conservation program free from Government-dominated production control, but administered, as far as practicable, by farmers themselves, to restrict the major benefits of these payments to operators of family type farms; to continue all present benefit payments until our program becomes operative, and to eliminate the present extensive and costly bureaucratic interference.

We shall provide incentive payments, when necessary, to encourage increased production of agricultural commodities, adaptable to our soil and climate, not now produced in sufficient quantities for our home markets, and will stimulate the use and processing of all farm products in industry as raw materials.

National Land Use Program

We shall promote a cooperative system of adequate farm credit, at lowest interest rates commensurate with the cost of money, supervised by an independent governmental agency, with ultimate farmer ownership and control; farm commodity loans to facilitate orderly marketing and stabilize farm income; the expansion of sound, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative associations; and the support of educational and extension programs to achieve more efficient production and marketing.

We shall foster government refinancing, where necessary, of the heavy Federal farm dept load through an agency segregated from cooperative credit.

We shall promote a national land use program for Federal acquisition, without dislocation of local tax returns, of nonproductive farm lands of voluntary sale or lease subject to approval of the States concerned; and the disposition of such lands to appropriate public uses including watershed protection and flood prevention, reforestation, recreation, erosion control, and the conservation of wild life.

We advocate a foreign trade policy which will end one-man tariff making, afford effective protection to farm products, regain our export markets, and assure an American price level for the domestically consumed portion of our export crops.

We favor effective quarantine against imported livestock, dairy and other farm products from countries which do not impose health and sanitary standards equal to our own domestic standards.

We approve the orderly development of reclamation and irrigation, project by project and as conditions justify.

We promise adequate assistance to rural communities sufferning disasters from flood, drought, and to her natural causes.

We shall promote stabilization of agricultural income through intelligent management of accumulated surpluses, and through the development of outlets by supplying those in need at home and abroad.

Tariff and Reciprocal Trade

We are threatened by unfair competition in world markets and by the invasion of our home markets, especially by the products of state-controlled foreign economies.

We believe in tariff protection for agriculture, labor, and industry, as essential to our American standard of living. The measure of the protection shall be determined by scientific methods with due regard to the interest of the consumer.

We shall explore every possibility of reopening the channels of international trade through negotiations so conducted as to produce genuine reciprocity and expand our exports.

We condemn the manner in which the so-called reciprocal trade agreements of the New Deal have been put into effect without adequate hearings, with undue haste, without proper consideration of our domestic producers, and without Congressional approval. These defects we shall correct.

Money

The Congress should reclaim its Constitutional powers over money, and withdraw the President's arbitrary authority to manipulate the currency, establish bimetallism, issue irredeemable paper money, and debase the gold and silver coinage. We shall repeal the Thomas inflation amendment of 1933 and the (foreign) Silver Purchase Act of 1934, and take all possible steps to preserve the value of the Government's huge holdings of gold and reintroduce gold into circulation.

Jobs and Idle Money

Believing it possible to keep the securities market clean without paralyzing it, we indorse the principle of truth in securities in the securities acts. To get billions of idle dollars and a multitude of idle men back to work, and to promote national defense, these acts should be revised and the polices of the commission changed to encourage the flow of private capital into industry.

Taxation

Public spending has trebled under the New Deal, while tax burdens have doubled. Huge taxes are necessary to pay for New Deal waste and for neglected national defense. We shall revise the tax system and remove those practices which impede recovery, and shall apply policies which stimulate enterprise. We shall not use the taxing power as an instrument of punishment or to secure objectives not otherwise obtainable under existing law.

Public Credit

With urgent need for adequate defense, the people are burdened by a direct and contingent debt exceeding $50,000,000,000. Twenty-nine billions of this debt has been created by New Deal borrowings during the past seven years. We pledge ourselves to conserve the public credit for all essential purposes by levying taxation sufficient to cover necessary civil expenditure, a substantial part of the defense cost, and the interest and retirement of the national debt.

Public Spending.

Millions of men and women still out of work after seven years of excessive spending refute the New Deal theory that "deficit spending" is the way to prosperity and jobs. Our American system of private enterprise, if permitted to go to work, can rapidly increase the wealth, income and standard of living of all the people. We solemnly pledge that public expenditures, other than those required for full national defense and relief, shall be cut to levels necessary for the essential services of Government.

Equal Rights.

We favor submission by Congress to the States of an amendment to the Constitution providing for equal rights for men and women.

Negro.

We pledge that our American citizens of Negro descent shall be given a square deal in the economic and political life of this Nation. Discrimination in the Civil Service, the Army, Navy, and all other branches of the Government must cease. To enjoy the full benefits of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness universal suffrage must be made effective for the Negro citizen. Mob violence shocks the conscience of the Nation, and legislation to curb this evil should be enacted.

Un-American Activities.

We vigorously condemn the New Deal encouragement of various groups that seek to change the American form of government by means outside the Constitution. We condemn the appointment of members of such un-American groups to high positions of trust in the national Government. The development of the treacherous so-called fifth column, as it has opearted in war-stricken countries should be a solemn warning to America. We pledge the Republican Party to get rid of such borers from within.

Immigration.

We favor the strict enforcement of all laws controlling the entry of aliens. The activities of undesirable aliens should be investigated, and those who seek to change by force and violence the American form of Government should be deported.

Veterans.

We pledge adequate compensation and care for veterans disabled in the service of our country, and for their widows, orphans, and dependents.

Indians.

We pledge an immediate and final settlement of all Indian claims between the Government and the Indian citizenship of the Nation.

Hawaii.

Hawaii, sharing the Nation's obligations equally with the several States, is entitled to the fullest measure of home rule; and to equality with the several States in the rights of her citizens and in the application of our national laws.

Government and Business.

We shall encourage a healthy, confident, and growing private enterprise, confine Government activity to essential public services, and regulate business only so as to protect consumer, employe, and investor and without restricting the production of more and better goods at lower prices.

Monopoly.

Since the passage of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by the Republican Party, we have consistently fought to preserve free competition with regulation to prevent abuse. New Deal policy fosters Government monopoly, restricts production, and fixes prices. We shall enforce anti-trust legislation without prejudice or discrimination. We condemn the use or threatened use of criminal indictments to obtain through consent decrees objectives not contemplated by law.

Government Competition.

We promise to reduce to the minimum Federal competition with business. We pledge ourselves to establish honest accounting and reporting by every agency of the Federal Government and to continue only those enterprises whose maintenance is clearly in the public interest.

Free Speech.

The principles of a free press and free speech, as established by the Constitution, should apply to the radio. Federal regulation of radio is necessary in view of the natural limitations of wave lengths, but this gives no excuse for censorship. We oppose the use of licensing to establish arbitrary controls. Lincenses should be recoverable only when, after public hearings, due cause for cancellation is shown.

Small Business.

The New Deal policy of interference and arbitrary regulation has injured all business, but especially small business. We promise to encourage the small businessman by removing unnecessary bureaucratic regulation and interference.

Stock and Commodity Exchanges.

We favor regulation of stock and commodity exchanges. They should be accorded the fullest measure of self-control consistent with the discharge of their public trust and the prevention of abuse.

Insurance.

We condemn the New Deal attempts to destroy the confidence of our people in private insurance institutions. We favor continuance of regulation of insurance by the several State.

Government Reorganization.

We shall reestablish in the Federal Civil Service a real merit system on a truly competitive basis and extend it to all non-policy-forming positions.

We pledge ourselves to enact legislation standardizing and simplifying quasi judicial and administrative agencies to insure adequate notice and hearing, impartiality, adherence to the rules of evidence and full judicial review of all questions of law and fact.

Our greatest protection against totalitarian government is the American system of checks and balances. The constitutional distribution of legislative, executive and judicial functions is essential to the preservation of this system. We pledge ourselves to make it the basis of all our policies affecting the organization and operation of our republican form of government.

Third Term.

To insure against the overthrow of our American system of government we favor an amendment to the Constitution providing that no person shall be President of the United States for more than two terms.

A Pledge of Good Faith.

The acceptance of the nominations made by this convention carries with it, as a matter of private honor and public faith, an undertaking by each candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth.

We earnestly urge all patriotic men and women, regardless of former affiliations, to unite with us in the support of our Declaration of Principles to the end that "Government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from this earth."

Equal Rights Plank Fails to Create Big Stir, Considered 10 Years Too Late

Women Show More Interest In U. S. Defense

Merit System Stand Pleases Secretary Of Voters League

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 26.—Just as women in attendance at this big show were about to settle into a "fair sex" groove and devote the rest of the week to tea drinking, along came the 1940 Republican platform this afternoon with a plank favoring an "equal rights" amendment to the Constitution.

Doris Stevens, long-time leader of the National Woman's Party, and Mary Philbrook, chairman of its Congressional committee, were near tears when they scanned the short paragraph for which they have fought since suffrage days.

"Honors should go to former Senator George Wharton Pepper and Alfred Landon, but some of it also will have to go to Hitler and the emergency he has created," Miss Stevens declared.

"Nothing has dramatized our 20-year appeal for the full dignity of citizenship as much as Hitler's claim that he was marching into the Lowlands to 'protect' them. Through him we have been able to make it clear at last that 'protection' can mean 'subjection.'"

To say that the "equal rights" plank created any big stir—even among the women—or will mean much to them one way or the other would give the wrong impression. The truth is that it came about ten years too late to be of great significance.

Union for National Defense

As a gesture that will help cement all groups behind the Nation's defense program, however, it will carry weight. Although most women have ceased to talk of "equal rights," the amendment idea has the indorsement of numerous groups—including the big and active National Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Florence Kerlin, legislative secretary of the National League of Women Voters, who also was waiting outside the platform committee's door, was elated that a plank on the merit system was included and that the tariff policy advocated was one "scientifically devised." She said her organization had lobbied for the inclusion of those two words.

Women as a whole and over the entire country, if a polling of the women delegates is any indication, will be more interested in the strong defense attitude expressed in the platform than in any specific handouts to their sex.

Nine New Women Members

Marion E. Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, announced today that nine new women members of the committee will serve their party in the next four years.

They will be: Mrs. Theodore Holman, of Utah; Mrs. Alfred Williams, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Clifford A. Parsons, of Arizona; Mrs. Charles B. Warren, of Michigan; Mrs. Pearl Bridegum, of New Jersey; Mrs. Victor Remley, of Missouri; Mrs. George T. Garlinger, of Oregon; Mrs. Jouett Ross Todd, of Kentucky, and Mrs. John E. Messervy, of South Carolina.

The nine will meet with Miss Martin tomorrow for an informal conference on campaign plans.

Four women were today announced as members of the permanent organization committee as follows: Mrs. Helen Essex, of New York; Mrs. Fred Mann, of South Dakota; Mrs. Eugene E. Robertson, of Alaska, and Louise Hunter Snow, of the District of Columbia. Miss Snow also is a member of the rules committee.

Candidates Vie For G. O. P.'s Ear

[illegible]ished by several delegates.

But these sound effects, and the occasional offerings of a brass band, were a feeble counterpoint against the incredibly generous output of Republican lungs.

A New Jersey delegate, questioned on the noise-making technique of the Willkie campaigners, put the whole thing simply: "We're just yelling our damned heads off."

Counter-Willkie forces fought with the same weapons. Some of the lustiest booing directed at Representative Halleck, of Indiana, during his Willkie nomination speech, came from 6-year-old Jimmy Tooze, son of the Oregon delegation's chairman.

Jimmy, admitted to the convention floor as an assistant sergeant at arms, disclaimed any previous experience in the booing line but said he was finding it all good fun.

Representative Bender, of Ohio, interviewed after he had helped bounce the C. B. S. noise indicator off its scale twice during the Taft demonstration, said modestly, "I wasn't using a thing except my own voice."

Few variations were noted among Dewey, Taft or Willkie adherents. The favorite delivery was from a squared-shoulder posture with the head tilted well back, leaving both hands free for shoving.

The great blast of decibels came at the end of a day marked by willingness of all candidates to let the general public sit in on the party's hottest nomination fight since 1920.

Coal miners, elephants, pretty girls in station wagons and City Hall jobholders were enrolled for parade duty here today as rival statesmen wooed the G. O. P. all over Philadelphia's front porch.

Every precaution was taken to assure that the office, in its search for the man, would know where to find him and how to spell the name.

Brass band for brass band, Willkie forces appeared to hold the edge at nightfall. Backers of the utilities executive parade past national committee headquarters 10 minutes after Dewey's name had been placed in nomination in Convention Hall.

Cheers of Dewey demonstrators, pouring out of a battery of loud speakers in Broad Street, were drowned out by the clamor of Willkie automobile horns.

Rumors that the candidate himself would ride in an open touring car at the end of the parade proved unfounded. Bringing up the rear were three dairy trucks, labelled "Win with Willkie," and two mounted policemen.

The Willkie parade was the last of a series that wrapped mid-city streets in confetti and dismembered telephone directories.

Earlier in the day several city hall corridors were emptied to bolster the ranks of a demonstration in honor of Gov. Arthur James. Joining these paraders was a coal miners' delegation with caps and canes.

Gannett forces again sent their three elephants through town with placards reading "Gannett Can Do It."

former President Hoover and it was widely reported that Hoover had joined in the drive to sabotage the Hoosier's candidacy.

An associate of Hoover told The Post tonight that the former President's position with regard to the leading candidates was approximately this:

He likes Taft, but doesn't think he has enough color and force to win in November.

He thinks Dewey is lacking in experience.

He doesn't necessarily dislike Willkie, but is angry because Willkie has consistently attacked some of his policies as President, like the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill.

He opposes Vandenberg because of his isolationist view in the past.

This would seem to eliminate from Hoover's favor tall those prominently mentioned — unless, that is, Mr. Hoover himself should be considered as candidate.

The rising tide for Willkie was accompanied by these developments today.

Gov. Harold S. Stassen, of Minnesota, 33-year-old keynoter of the convention, said that Willkie was the "man for the job" in these critical days, and announced he would vote for him.

Warns Politicians

Representative Frank O. Horton, of Wyoming, launched a counterattack against those Republican members of Congress who have been trying to "stop" Willkie. He issued a statement saying that he and a number of other House members—representing the Midwest, West and Atlantic Coast—had interviewed Willkie on the tariff and trade pacts and had found him "completely acceptable."

Former United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, said he believed Willkie could win in November and he warned that "the politicians better lay off and let the people have their way."

Lester D. Summerfield, national committeeman for Nevada, said he had wired to Republican headquarters, back home, asking that a sample poll be taken to determine a sentiment on candidates here. He said the poll showed a 62 per cent vote for Willkie.

Willkie caused a fresh buzz of speculation when it was learned that late today he had called on former President Hoover, who, himself, is among those mentioned as nomination possibilities.

Just Paid His "Respects"

"I merely telephoned Mr. Hoover that I wished to pay my respects, so I came over and talked with him," Willkie said as he emerged from Hoover's quarters. "We discussed briefly the problems of the world, the effect of the war on conditions, and things like that."

The two had remained in conference for 22 minutes.

"Did you talk about candidates?" a newsman asked Willkie.

"No," the utilities magnate replied.

But there was nothing in Willkie's broad smile and assuring manner as he emerged from the former President's suite to indicate that he had received any discouragement from Hoover.

Willkie, who has just about smashed all the rules for political etiquette, made another audacious raid over the enemy lines today. He went before a large section of the New York delegation in an attempt to lure votes from District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

Never, perhaps, had a candidate for the President made such a talk. He said he had nothing to hide. Was there anything anybody wanted to ask him about himself? If so he would be glad to answer.

"I'll take a drink at any spot on the road," he said. "I like to look at pretty girls, and if I were 15 years younger I would look twice."

Alluding to the "smear" campaign that has been launched against him here, he said he had been accused both of being a semite and an antisemite.

"Let me tell you this," he told the New Yorkers. "As a young lawyer in Akron, Ohio, I stood up and fought the Ku Klux Klan when nearly every judge on the bench was a Klansman."

He said his candidacy had been criticized on the ground that it was based on nothing more than a sheep-like movement among the people.

"It's been so long since the old-line politicians have heard the voice of the people," Willkie said, "that they don't recognize it when they hear it."

Willkie, his blue suit rumpled, his tie awry and his hair tumbling down, told the New Yorkers that he was confident of victory.

"Now it's just a question of counting the votes," he said. "It's going over and it's going over fast. I'll appreciate it if New York will come to me."

"What ballot do you expect to win on?" He was asked.

"I'm good," he answered, "but not that good."

As Willkie was pushing his way toward the elevator, his straw hat slanted at a crazy angle, a colored delegate rushed up to him and said he could have 45 colored delegates from the South just for the asking.

Willkie this evening named as his floor manager Gov. Stassen, a young man with a future in the party and one who is not given to picking losers.

Hoover, by the way, made a statement at a press conference this morning that touched on one of the things that has been worrying the Willkie people.

"I'm confident," said Hoover, "that this will be an open convention. The shifting times and the problems facing us make that imperative. The delegates here are in a most serious mood, and the convention will make its own determinations after full consideration. There should be no interference with these determinations.

Alludes to Harding Days

"I do not believe in 2 o'clock-in-the-morning conferences."

"The chief" was alluding to the historic Chicago conference in "a smoke-filled room at 2 o'clock in the morning," which brought about the nomination of Warren G. Harding.

For four days now, several G. O. P. leaders have been trying to bring about a deal between the forces of Senator Taft and District Attorney Dewey. They probably are still trying to do so.

If these efforts should succeed, Willkie would be sunk and he knows it. He says he doesn't think that either Taft or Dewy can deliver his votes in a deal. A lot of observers agree with him.

Here is the way the situation shaped on the eve of the balloting:

Dewey claimed between 370 and 410 votes. He probably will hold some in reserve on the first ballot to give his candidacy the appearance of growing stronger on the second ballot.

Taft also will hold back some on the first ballot and for the same reason. He expects to have close to 300 on the second ballot.

Willkie expects to have something like 100 on the first ballot, and he is counting on desertions from other candidates to send this number up progressively on subsequent ballots.

Dewey's strength would seem to be the most fragile. For example, he came here fairly confident that he had the New Jersey delegation in his pocket. Already, however, a large part of that delegation is ready to break away to Willkie.

The Taft people are insisting that their candidate will be the chief beneficiary if the Dewey candidacy begins to crack up. They say they expect a good majority of Dewey votes to come over to Taft, and there is some evidence to bear them out.

Wait for Bandwagon

There is a large bloc of votes spread out among "favorite sons." These are the votes of the bandwagon jumpers, who will be ready to leap toward the first candidate that bears the earmarks of a winner.

Senator Taft spent most of today interviewing delegates. Twice during the day he was host at cocktail parties.

Candidate Dewey likewise spent most of his day talking to delegates, but he took time out to address the Texas delegation—the first time he had emulated Willkie and gone before a delegation pledged to another candidate. The Texas delegation is pledged to Taft.

Dewey made a savage attack on the New Deal, mocking President Roosevelt and winding up his long list of indictments with a mincing parody of the Chief Executive.

"Mr. Swanson and Mr. Edison have been our Secretaries of the Navy and Mr. Woodring Secretary of War," he began.

13,000,000 Curry Combs

"Suddenly, when our attention is directed to other things, we wake up to find that we have an Army whose proudest possessions 13,000,000 currycombs and a Navy that may be adequate to defend one of our two coasts, if it happens to be in the right place at the right time by the grace of God.

"Now, either these men were incompetent and Mr. Roosevelt was asleep for seven years or else the President knew that they were incompetent and has been selling the American people down the river for seven years by keeping them in the Cabinet."

Dewey then went on to speak in the voice of President Roosevelt, saying:

"Now at the end of seven years I realize that I've got to do something about it. The American people are worried and I must get a Cabinet if I want to be reelected and perpetuate myself. So I put them in (Knox and Stimson) to establish myself firmly in the White House, but don't worry, I'll take them out after November."

Taft's nomination, put forward by Editor Grove Patterson, of Toledo, brought a noisier 20-minute demonstration, sustained beyond the gavel's rapping of the permanent chairman. Even Gannett's nomination brought a minor stir.

But bedlam broke out in this hall tonight when Halleck dared the party to put forward a former Democrat who "licked Franklin D. Roosevelt once and can do it again."

Halleck was interrupted throughout his nominating address by both boos and cheering, and once the Indiana Congressman shouted: "Can anyone be omitted from consideration here? Is the Republican Party a closed corporation?" Willkie backers retorted with a thunderous "No!"

The parade of State standards was slow in starting, as divided delegations, like New York and Virginia, fought for possession of banners to take into the parade. Some unofficial signs were knocked to the floor by "Stop Willkie" delegates, but new ones took their places, and the procession of States grew ever in marchers.

In the Virginia delegation, Glen Preston Anderson, editor of the Smith County News, Marion, Va., tried to prevent Clarence Dowler and L. S. Parsons, of Norfolk, from taking the Virginia banner into the line. Fifteen minutes later the Old Dominion sign was wrested free to join the demonstration.

New York finally joined, and one by one the elephant-adorned signs of Connecticut, Minnesota, Maine, Rhode Island, Delaware, Maryland, California, West Virginia, and Washington bobbed behind Indiana's in the churning whirl. Some ticker tape showered from the galleries.

Calls Vainly for Order

Chairman Martin called vainly for order, warned gallery guests to quiet, and had to introduce Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, for the first seconding speech before the din subsided. Each caution from Martin was followed by renewed chanting of "We Want Willkie." Only once did the band offer a lift to the cheering, and the organ offered no assistance.

Repeatedly in his nominating speech, Halleck reminded delegates that this is "a free and independent convention" and that this time "delegates are going to choose the candidate."

The first boos sounded faintly when Halleck pledged Willkie to keep the Nation out of war—Willkie has been charged with favoring intervention by some of his opponents. Applause promptly swallowed them. More came when Halleck said Willkie has waged his campaign without a political organization and no campaign funds.

One of the mightiest outbursts of applause followed Halleck's assertion that "You and I know Wendell Willkie can win in November." It was the psychology of victory that Halleck played for throughout his speech.

Audience Interrupts

Both O'Brian, in nominating Dewey, and Patterson, in putting forward Taft's name, were permitted to finish their speeches without interruption, but a constant refrain from the audience responded to the Halleck speech.

While Halleck and later Barton asserted that Willkie didn't "have to be born in the Republican Party" to stand by whoever it nominates in November, O'Brian and Patterson took indirect pot-shots at the Hoosier's former political faith by stressing the "life-long" Republicanism of their own candidates.

O'Brian in his opening nominating eulogy of Dewey sought to offset the charges of "inexperience" that have been whispered by the poll-leading candidate's opponents.

He said the New York racket buster's leadership has been tested and proven in his "never-ending battle against the enemies of moral forces." The New York lawyer said Dewey has shown by high achievement that he can unite divergent American interests "into one great common purpose." He declared free government in America will endure "because it makes possible a career such as that of this man."

Band Leads Din

Dewey-pledged delegations, led by New York, jumped to their feet and milled through the narrow aisles. Somehow a band got into the hall, ignoring the official ban. It drumbeat and tooted new enthusiasm into a demonstration that never reached a hysterical pitch. The convention organ joined in the din.

The man who has more pledged first ballot delegates than any other candidate, but whom "experts" say will fail for lack of reserve strength, beat out upwards of a dozen other aspirants in getting his bid before the convention first.

"Plain as an Old Shoe"

Patterson matched Taft's "experience" in Government against Dewey's, but never by name. The Toledo editor bore heavily on the Senator's homespun qualities. He said Taft was an "plain as an old shoe" and not much of a "back-slapper" but he was a "go-getter and a great bringer-backer."

"He presents a program," shouted Patterson. "He is equipped to face the tragedy of a war-blasted world. He has imagination and courage."

Gannett Second on List

Jockeying for position in nomination opened with the reading of the roll of States by Permanent Chairman Joe Martin.

Frank E. Gannett, "the man" a 63-year-old Rochester publisher, won the duel for the second speech of nomination, as he will almost certainly lose a place on the Republican ticket. Arizona yielded to New York for Representative Wadsworth to place Gannett's name before the convention.

Wadsworth, frequently mentioned for the Presidency in his own right, said the nation needs a businessman "who knows the value of a dollar," and said Gannett was the man.

A four-minute demonstration followed, but only one delegation standard was waved. A foghorn drowned out the applause. In the rear of the hall there was a parade by a group of nondelegates, holding Gannett's picture aloft.

One by one, half a dozen other delegations announced that in their turn they would present the names of their favorite sons: Iowa—Col. Hanford MacNider, former Assistant Secretary of War; Michigan—Vandenberg; Oregon—Senate Minority Leader McNary; Pennsylvania—Gov. Arthur [illegible] James; and South Dakota—Gov. Bushfield.

Unproposed at this stage of the proceedings, if in fact he is ever put forward, was former President Hoover, who last night stirred the convention with his attack on the New Deal's "suicide" course.

Titanic German Barter Deals Reported in South America

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, June 26—Nazi agents already are trying to negotiate gigantic barter deals in the rich South American field, particularly in Argentina, a well-informed source said today.

Their aim, this source said, is to strengthen Germany further by cutting off Argentina and Uruguay and other South American nations from close economic and military cooperation with the United States.

They are reported seeking millions of pesos worth of Argentine foods and raw products, payment for which would be made through German electrification of railways and the construction of hydro-electric plants to offset diminishing coal and oil supplies.

The German agents are supposed to have gone so far, even, as to inquire into availability of shipping space to move their purchases to Germany.

Other equally well-informed sources said German armament agents are being attentive to Argentine and Uruguayan rearmament plans and profess they can offer prices far below the scale for comparable United States products for delivery late in October.

Similar offers of German goods for September and October delivery have been made in Brazil and Uruguay.

A resolution to send a special mission to Germany, Italy and Spain "to study the basis of their commercial organizations in order to propose adequate means for Argentina's participation in their post-war arrangements" was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Matias Sanchez Sorondo.

Sanchez is regarded as the strongest supporter of the totalitarian governments in the Argentine Congress. No immediate action was taken and informed senators said it probably would be defeated.

United States representatives in lower South America express fear their country may "miss the boat" on this continent unless it promises trade through the extension of strong support to the nations whose normal European markets have been cut off.

Events of recent weeks have convinced United States diplomats that the presentation of plans for cooperation in terms of dollars and cents will be more effective than in terms of warships and planes.

Cartel Plan Believed Too Slow

While the Pan American cartel plan has aroused interest, many persons say it is too slow and complicated to meet the emergency.

Observations in Uruguay and Argentina indicate that vigorous German and Italian barter trade drives are more imminent in these countries than political uprisings inspired or directed by Nazis.

A question is raised as to what extent the German offers of barter are made for propaganda purposes. Regardless of that possibility, they are effective in cutting United States sales.

2 More Ships To Bring Back U. S. Refugees

The State Department announced yesterday that the American Government had decided to send two more ships to Europe to bring back approximately 3,200 American refugees who wish to return home from the British Isles and the Continent.

The United States liner Washington will sail tomorrow for Galway, Ireland, to arrive July 4. Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to London, has advised the State Department that there are enough Americans who wish to return "under present circumstances" to fill the Washington, which has a capacity of 2,000. It was recalled that the most recent refugee ships to return were not filled to capacity, but the danger of bombing of British cities was believed to have changed the attitude of many Americans.

It was also decided to send the United States liner Manhattan to Lisbon to repatriate 1,200 American citizens in Spain and Portugal who, it is reported, wish to return to the United States. The vessel will sail for Lisbon Monday. It is to reach Lisbon July 8.

Both vessels already have made one trip to Europe to bring back refugees. The Washington docked at New York last week after having had a dramatic encounter with a German submarine off Portugal. Thet German government spokesman who disclosed the submarine's identity said the German government had not been notified of the Washington's course until after the incident.

The State Department will send word to all belligerents of the courses of both vessels far in advance, it was announced.

Meanwhile the Government moved to tighten restrictions on aliens. The Justice Department announced that after July 1 every alien who is not a legal resident of the United States will have to have a passport before entering this country, and a visa issued by an American consular officer.

Republicans Adopt 'No War' Platform

might be eased into war by word or deed during the absence of our elected representatives from Washington," the Republicans allege. Nowhere in the entire platform does the word "Democrat" appear—the attack is aimed at President Roosevelt in person and the New Deal in general.

The foreign affairs plank, which has been subject to redrafting and rephrasing for days, starts out with the flat statement that "the Republican Party is firmly opposed to involving this Nation in foreign war." But a little later it recognizes that the present war "threatens to engulf the whole world."

At the behest of the isolationist group on the resolutions committee—which included Chairman Herbert K. Hyde, of Oklahoma; Brooks, and Senators John Thomas, of Idaho, and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts—the human and material cost of the last war is carefully pointed out.

"By the President's own admission, we are still wholly unprepared to defend our country, its institutions and our individual liberties," despite the fact that "foreign wars have been in progress for two years or more," the plank says.

After contrasting the Republican stand for "Americanism, preparedness and peace" with the New Deal's "responsibility" for unpreparedness," the plank urges prompt building up of American national defense to a degree which will permit this country "efficiently to uphold in war the Monroe Doctrine."

The "aid to Great Britain" plank, retained through the insistence of such resolutions committee members as former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, and former Senator Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey, declares that "our sympathies have been profoundly stirred by invasion of unoffending countries and by disaster to nations whose ideals most closely resemble our own."

As approved by the resolutions committee late last night, the plank contained a clause that the "aid" to be given other countries must not include sending the "sons of America" abroad. This phrase had been added at the last minute, as one or more concessions to the extreme isolationist view of Brooks, who had previously given warning that the Illinois delegation would carry the fight to the floor of the convention if the plank were not satisfactory.

Pepper Walks Out

But when the drafting committee, headed by Pepper, met this morning to put the final polish on the platform, an explosion occurred. Pepper, Edge and one or two others who had been absent from last night's resolutions committee meeting, were infuriated on discovering the "sons of America" phrase.

Pepper stalked out of the committee room, threatening to resign, and Brooks went to a caucus of the Illinois delegation to learn if he should insist on the disputed words. The Illinoisans—perhaps the most militantly isolationist of all the delegates—agreed with Brooks that it would be better to give way then to split the convention on a point that could be read into the platform any way. The committee knocked out the objectionable phrase and Pepper, who had returned to the meeting, later explained the row as "just a flash of temper on my part."

In the process of "polishing" the platform, Senator Lodge managed to write in a stronger statement on old-age pensions than the resolutions committee had originally approved, though it is weaker than he himself desired. It provides for greater old-age benefits "to the extent that the revenues raised for this purpose will permit." It also would enlarge the unemployment compensation provisions of the Social Security Act.

Couched in General Terms

By and large, the platform is couched in rather general terms and stresses State as opposed to Federal control of various governmental functions and suggests the amendment, but not abolition, of many New Deal innovations.

Except on the third-term plank and on the declarations for aid to the democracies and opposition to war, the platform aroused but little vocal enthusiasm while it was being read by Chairman Hyde. Delegates were apparently saving their steam for the nominations, which immediately followed adoption of the platform.

The very short plank on relief urges removal of "waste, discrimination and politics," and return of relief administration to the States with Federal grants-in-aid. The labor plank recommends amendment of the Wagner Act "in fairness to employers and all groups of employes," but offers no specific proposals.

Agriculture which gets the longest plank in the platform would be granted a continuation of benefit payments for soil conservation "free from Govenment-dominated poduction control;" incentive payments for production of some agricultural commodities; "a cooperative system of adequate farm credit" at low interest rates and supervised by an independent Federal agency "with ultimate farmer ownership and control;" farm commodity loans and Government refinancing of "the heavy Federal farm debt load."

An effective "quarantine" against livestock imported from nations with inadequate sanitary standards was also recommended.

Promise Spending Cut

Tariff protection, "genuine reciprocity" and Congressional approval for trade agreements were urged in the reciprocal trade plank; while the money plank urges repeal of the laws permitting American purchase of foreign silver and granting the President "arbitrary authority" over the currency.

"Huge taxes are necessary to pay for New Deal waste and for neglected national defense," says the platform, promising revision of the tax system. Taxation "sufficient to cover necessary civil expenditure, a substantial part of the defense cost and the interest and retirement of the national debt" is offered, along with a promise to cut public spending.

The New Deal was "vigorously" condemned for allegedly encouraging groups seeking to change the American form of government outside the Constitution and appointing "members of such un-American groups to high positions of trust in the National Government."

Along with "strict enforcement" of the immigration laws, the platform urges deportation of aliens "who seek to change by force and violence the American form of government." In the Negro plank, legislation to curb the evil of "mob violence" was recommended.

Encourages Business

The platform expresses encouragement for private enterprise, especially small business and promises reduction to a minimum of "Federal competition with business"—at the same time urging enforcement of antitrust legislation. Censorship of the radio is condemned as are "New Deal attempts to destroy the confidence of our people in private insurance institutions." Legislation standardizing the procedure of administrative agencies is indorsed.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

U. S. to Buy Huge Supplies of Tin and Rubber for Defense Needs

James Forrestal, new administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, reported for work at the White House. It is assumed that he will be used as a liasion man in the defense setup.

President Roosevelt approved legislation which would transfer lighthouse service personnel, now under the Commerce Department, to the War or Navy Departments in the event of a national emergency.

Also signed by the President was legislation designed to train commercial communications agencies for National defense. This was requested by the Navy Department.

Maj. James H. Doolittle, famed Army speed pilot, was ordered from the retired list to active duty for a year as assistant supervisor of the Central Air Corps procurement district.

In seeking supplies of strategic materials, tin and rubber, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, was in conference late yesterday with Sir John Hay, of the International Rubber Regulating Committee which controls world rubber sales and production. Similar talks with officials of the International Tin Committee will begin soon.

Jones estimated that $100,000,000 to $250,000,000 would be needed to make purchases contemplated in the near future. He said he soon will meet with ten representatives of mining interests. Other strategic war minerals include tungsten, lead, nickel and mercury.

The Packard Motor Co., pioneer in airplane engine manufacture and a joint developer of the Liberty motor of the World War, possibly may take over manufacture of the Rolls Royce engines. It also was learned that the Chrysler Motor Co has been approached about manufacturing these motors, but rejected the proposal with its president, K. T. Keller, pointed out that his company was better equipped to manufacture tanks.

The Army again moved to bolster Caribbean defense when it ordered 137 men from Kelly Field, Texas, to the new air base at Puerto Rico. In the Canal Zone activity was described as a "state of alert," designed to test the readiness of canal defenses.

Unconfirmed rumors after a conference between Attorney General Jackson, and Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau on "shipping matters," hinted that it might have concerned possible action to prevent French merchant vessels, including the luxury liner Normandie from leaving American ports. Under terms of the Franco-German armistice the vessels were to be recalled if possible.

Activities of the Defense Advisory Commission included a survey of iron and steel needs of the Nation, according to a report by Iron Age, and a discussion of problems relating to skilled and unskilled workers by Sidney Hillman with machinists and auto workers representatives.

Work Goes On, Says Ford

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 26.—Henry Ford said today that his plans have not been altered in any way by the decision of the National Defense Commission to discontinue negotiations with his company for the mass production of Rolls Royce aviation engines.

"In other words," he said in an interview, "the preliminary work we have done to be prepared to swing into volume output of the motors for the United States Government, when and if it desires them, will go on without interruption. We will be ready to go any time the United States Government says the word."

The defense commission announced in Washington last night that Ford's refusal to manufacture the engines for the British government had forced cancellation of plans to have the Ford Co. make the power plants.

"To undertake to make aviation engines or any other form of war munitions for any foreign government," Ford said today, "would be a step toward getting this country into war. I want to keep this country out of war.

"When I offered four weeks ago to make airplanes on a volume production basis I distinctly said I would do so for the United States Government for defensive purposes only. You will recall that I said at that time that great care would have to be taken to see that gigantic defensive armament did not become an 'offensive' one; I said also that great pressure would be brought to force us into war.

"I was advised that our greatest defensive need was for pursuit airplanes and I became convinced that if we could provide these in huge numbers any foreign nation with belligerent designs would think twice before attempting any attack upon this country."

In the engineering building some 300 engineers and draftsmen are at work making drawings for every part needed in making the Rolls Royce engine, the tools required and the extra floor space to be provided within the Rouge plant. Experimental crankshafts have been cast 126 pounds lighter in the original rough state than those made in the Rolls Royce factories abroad; ignition units and pistons have been reproduced; torsional tests have been made and the factory "layout" has been reproduced on paper.

"We're ready to go," Ford remarked, smiling.

Cancels Order for Fords

San Antonio, Tex., June 26 (AP).—Mayor Maury Maverick said today the City of San Antonio had canceled an order for 22 Ford automobiles, explaining in a statement:

"Ford has taken a stand against the Government in refusing to fill orders of the National Defense Council. We take our stand with the Government and will do no business with those against our Government."

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of a French national commission in London, announced today the projected organization of a French Legion in England, then bitterly attacked French Premier-Marshal Petain for failure to build a French mechanized force and declared that France "can, and will, be saved only be us here."

Petain, he said, "presided over our military organization" after the World War, as generalissimo until 1932, and as war minister in 1935. (It was in 1935 that De Gaulle appeared before the Chamber of Deputies in an appeal for mechanization, going over the heads of his superiors and the war ministry, with the backing of Paul Reynaud, who, when he became premier and war minister, made De Gaulle his chief aide.)

Branding the French-German armistice as "dishonorable," De Gaulle, in a French language broadcast, declared:

"In order to obtain and to accept such an act of enslavement there was no need for you, Marshal Petain, there was no need for the victor of Verdun—anyone would have done."

Backing of Reynaud Expected

De Gaulle, who has been made liable to court martial by the Petain government, said he was forming the French Legion in England from the nucleus of the poilus who escaped from Dunkerque—to "fight on to victory with the cream of France's maritime strength."

In this connection, London heard reports from Gibraltar that important units of the French fleet were assembling at Casablanca, Morocco.

The French National Committee—a sort of shadow government in exile—is still in formation. It will include "the most representative men of the former French government," said an aide of De Gaulle.

The aide intimated that he expected the backing, if not personal aid, of former Premier Paul Reynaud, who last was heard from in Lisbon, and said that "one or more" of former Premiers Herriot, Blum and Boncour, all now in England, might be invited to serve.

Envoy Said to Have Quit

Official sources said tonight they understood that Charles Corbin French ambassador to London had sent his resignation to the Bordeaux government and that it had been accepted.

[Illustrative of the uncertainty over the support De Gaulle may expect from Frenchmen outside France were the contrasting interpretations of Corbin's resignation.

[Said the New York Times:

["Corbin feels that in view of the new alignment of Anglo-French relations since the armistice another envoy could probably represent the views of the Petain government more accurately. He is expected to return to France soon. . . .

["There is no question of Corbin remaining here (London) to cooperate with Gen. de Gaulle's committee, the importance of which, it is now felt, has been exaggerated . . . Instead of being established as a political committee which would attempt to compete with Premier Petain for the support of the French people, the committee is more likely to develop into a military recruiting office for the British army."

Replying to Petain's attack on de Gaulle and the London Commission, the die-hard general declared that "in these hours of shame and anger for the Fatherland, one voice must answer you—that voice will be mine.

"France has been struck down, not by the number of German effectives, not by their superior courage, but by the enemy's mechanized force, with all its offensive power and maneuverability."

500 ENJOY FETE—Keeping up a tradition that has been unbroken since 1913, the Washington Elks Lodge yesterday played host to 500 boys and girls at Glen Echo Park. It was the lodge's twenty-eighth annual children's outing and youngsters from eight institutions spent the entire day devouring sandwiches, milk, ice cream, taking free rides and being entertained, having the time of their lives. Daddy (George Beall) was as much fun to Junior (center) as he was to Ruth Crismond (left) and the other youngsters. (To publish pictures of riotous session of G. O. P. convention last night on Page 12, The Post withdrew from this edition other pictures on the Elks' outing. A full picture-story layout is on Page 12 of The Post's three earlier editions of today.)

the axis powers.

"It also is understood that royal houses related to the British Crown will be the first choice if it comes to seeking an intermediary."

[Authoritative British sources described the reports as "positive rubbish and absolute rot." It was stated no such move has been, or will be, contemplated.]

The Nazi news agency acknowledged that the British on the night of June 20 alone dropped 371 bombs on German soil, killing 16 persons and wounding 41, but contended that British bomb-sighting reflected "general nervousness in Britain."

The counter-blow on England, said D. N. B., "will bring thousand-fold terrors, compared to which the nightly attacks directed by the British air leadership will pale."

Two hundred bombs fell in Helder, a Dutch naval base now in German hands, on the night of June 24, the agency said tonight.

D. N. B. gave the Dutch newspaper Telegraaf as its authority, and said most of the bombs fell on nonmilitary objectives.

Numerous fires broke out, and many houses were destroyed. It was declared that 38 dead and 22 wounded civilians had been counted thus far.

While Germany gathered strength for a final smash against the British it was disclosed that Adolf Hitler, sight-seeing in fallen Paris, had visited the tomb of Napoleon who once tried to crush the British.

The Reichsfuehrer entered the Hotel Des Invalides yesterday, stood for a while in the big rotunda gazing down at the tomb of the little Corsican whom he admires and then walked to a memorial tablet which bears Napoleon's words:

"I desire that my ashes rest at the banks of the Seine among the French people whom I loved so dearly."

As territorial provisions of the German-French armistice set the military stage for a new phase of the war against Britain, the high command announced that "several airports and airplane factories" in Central England were bombed in the night.

Attacks on such Central England town as Bellingham, identified as a munitions making center, have shown that the "small island, with its concentrated industrial centers, is easily reachable by German stukas (dive bombers) and bombers," observed the commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland.

Japan May Ask Axis Approval For East Indies Protectorate

Tokyo, (Thursday) June 27 (AP).—Japan's position regarding Oriental holdings of France, Great Britain and The Netherlands will be brought to the personal attnetion of Adolf Hitler if possible, an official source said today.

Informed sources in Tokyo said Tuesday Japan might declare a protectorate over French Indo-China and Netherlands holdings in Eastern Asia after discussions with Germany and Italy.

It has been indicated, too, that an "important pronouncement" might be made soon on Japan's new Asiatic policy—in effect an Asiatic Monroe doctrine warning all powers—including Germany and Italy—not to interfere with Japanese solution of problems there.

The roving envoy, Naotake Sato, who represented Japan in concluding an economic agreement between Italy and Manchukuo and Japan, has been given the job of explaining Japan's attitude to Hitler.

It is understood that he already has taken the opportunity, while discussing economic matters with Premier Mussolini of Italy to reach a "complete understanding" on political questions created by developments in the European war.

The Japanese foreign office said Sato was given no special instructions beyond those to make Japan's position clear, and attempt to learn Hitler's attitude.

Chungking, China, (Thursday), June 27.—One hundred and fifty-six Japanese warplanes bombed Chungking yesterday, causing widespread damage.

All Americans here are believed safe. Casualties were estimated at less than 200.

It was the largest number of planes ever to attack this wartime capital.

Several Americans were jarred when the dugouts in which they had taken refuge were hit directly.

Many bombs, dropped in districts already devastated, but approximately 8,000 buildings were damaged and more than 200 stores and shops were destroyed. The main building of the Canadian Mission Hospital was smashed and its dental clinic destroyed. All doctors, nurses and patients were safe.

Two bombs fell in the "safety zone" on the south bank of the Yangtze.

Hongkong Prepares

Hongkong, June 26 (AP).—Border bridges were dynamited and even girls were told to be ready to "consider themselves soldiers" as this British crown colony watched Japan tighten its net around French Indo-China today.

The bridges destroyed were those spanning the Shumchun River, a part of the Chinese frontier of Hongkong's mainland.

These and other defense measures, however, were described as "purely precautionary." An official statement said there was "no cause for alarm" in the presence of Japanese troops just across the border, since they purportedly were merely mopping up Chinese guerrillas.

Rumors circulated, however, that the Japanese were planning to blockade Hongkong to compel Britain to close the route through Burma over which China has been obtaining supplies.

The British-owned newspaper, China Mail, said Japanese warships already were blockading Haiphong, seaport of French Indo-China some 500 miles southwest of Hongkong, and Japanese army headquarters announced its advancing units had reached Lungchow, in Kwangsi province near the Indo-China border.

Decoux to Rule Indo-China

Berlin, June 26 (AP).—The German radio today carried reports from Bordeaux that Vice Admiral Jean Decoux, naval expert and authority on Asiatic defense, has been appointed French governor general of Indo-China.

Other appointments reported:

Jose Caston, director for political affairs in the French colonial ministry, appointed special commissioner for coordination and preservation of French interests in Indo-China, New Caledonia and French oceanic islands;

Weygand urging them to maintain discipline and faith in the Petain regime.]

At Gibraltar unconfirmed reports also were heard that Gen. Nogues had ordered immediate arrest of Edouard Daladier, former premier of France, who went to Casablanca to confer with the general.

The new air raid found British ground and air forces ready, and Britons forewarned by War Minister Eden's broadcast message that "enemy bombing attacks at night will be continued . . . but will be repulsed."

[German press emphasis on British bombing raids on German cities appeared to indicate the Nazi attacks would be increasingly strong.]

Continental Coast Raided

Eden warned also that Britain must expect "other forms of attack" and guarded official accounts of an audacious British raid on German-held positions along the continental coastline were taken as suggesting the start of a campaign of harassment to prevent the Nazis from using certain coast bases for invasion of England.

(Authoritative German sources commented in Berlin that the raids were a "ridiculous undertaking—incompetently managed and insufficient." D. N. B., official German news agency, said the British were driven off after attacking two positions on the French coast of the Channel. Two Germans were wounded, D. N. B. said.)

The British said heavily armed shock troops, supported by fleet and Royal Air force units, stormed German positions at undisclosed points along the coast.

They came away with "much useful information," an official announcement said.

Britons said significantly that "further" raids might be equally successful.

Neutral military observers expressed belief that such coastal raids might become so effective as to keep the German army diverted from invasion of Britain.

No one regards Britain's land raids as a preliminary to a large-scale thrust against the Germany army which now holds North Sea, Channel and Atlantic coast lines.

But these neutral sources emphasize the damage which the R. A. F. and the shock troops could do in repeated attacks.

British observers said it was quite possible that the first raiding parties included demolition groups especially schooled in destruction of supply depots, docks and quays.

"Landings were effected at a number of points and contact made with German troops," said the announcement.

"Casualties were inflicted and some enemy dead fell into our hands. Our forces suffered no casualties."

New Aggressive Phase

But the British Press Association described the exploit as signaling "a new phase of aggressive action," and the British news agency Reuters declared that it demonstrated the Germans' "vast responsibilities" in trying to hold a great coastline running from the Scandinavian peninsula to the Spanish frontier.

"We shall subject the enemy in his own country to constant and heavy counter-attack from the air," Eden said, jjust after the bombing of a chemical plant at Cologne and destruction of an ammunition dump on the fortified island of Helgoland were announced by the air ministry.

Other units of the Royal Air Force made a daylight attack Tuesday on an airdrome at Waalhaven, near Rotterdam, in the Netherlands, and still another raided an airdrome at Bomoen, near Bergen, Norway.

Eden emphasized the government's "stay-where-you-are" instructions to civilians, explaining:

"Refugees on the roads are the outward signs that the enemy has succeeded in creating the conditions for military success. The mass of refugees helped to lose the Battle of France. They will not lose the Battle of Britain."

Speaking of enemy air raids, Eden said it would be found that their "bark is worse than their bite," and pointed to "our exceedingly powerful air force" as the first line of defense against these attacks.

"I can and do promise you that the lot of the enemy will become increasingly unbearable," Eden said.

Mr. Ford's Refusal

Henry Ford is entirely within his rights in refusing to manufacture airplane motors for Great Britain. In ordinary circumstances that decision on his part would be of no concern to the United States Government. But at the moment this country as well as Great Britain is interested in quantity production of Rolls-Royce aviation engines. So the effect of Mr. Ford's decision is to retard our national defense efforts.

Some commentators have given the impression that the National Defense Advisory Commission refuses to let Mr. Ford manufacture airplane motors for the Army solely because of his unwillingness to help the British. If that view could be sustained, a presumption of arbitrary conduct would fall more heavily upon the commission than on Mr. Ford. It goes without saying that American defense preparations must go forward regardless of the attitude of any industrialist toward the manufacture of supplies for other countries.

But it is not simply a question of securing airplane engines for the British. London authorities recently granted free rights for the production of Rolls-Royce engines in the United States. Production facilities for these motors do not now exist. Any firm which undertakes such production will have to spend a large sum for tooling and equipment. If these expenses can be spread out over as many as 9,000 engines the cost per unit can be held down to a reasonable figure. But if the United States alone should order 3,000 engines, it is estimated that the cost would be increased by one-third.

Ultimately the United States may need far more than 3,000 of these motors. But the War Department has good reason at the present time not to increase that order, even though a larger order would mean a lowering of the cost per unit. While this motor has performed well in England, minor changes will have to be made to facilitate quantity production here. So, in a limited sense, its use is experimental.

In the circumstances the national interest clearly calls for placement of the American order with a firm that will also fill the British order. Mr. Ford has lost an opportunity to serve his country. No doubt that opportunity will be eagerly sought by other manufacturers also in a position to render effective service.

Italy's Terms

In comparison with the armistice terms imposed on France by Germany those laid down by Italy seem moderate and, to an extent, even generous.

While German troops are to occupy a good half of France, including the entire west coast, Italy is to occupy only that small stretch of French territory in the Alps and along the Riviera which her troops succeeded in taking before the fighting ended. France's Mediterranean coast will remain almost wholly in French hands, although on a demilitarized basis.

Demilitarized zones, rather than occupation by Italian forces, are also provided in the case of Algeria, Tunisia and French Somaliland. In the latter area, however, Italy is to "have full and constant right to use the port of Djibuti with all its equipment, together with the French section of the Djibuti-Addis Ababa railway."

This moderation on Italy's part, however, is more seeming than real. The Franco-Italian armistice, while a separate instrument, dovetails with the armistice concluded between Germany and France. Together they leave France helpless, a base for German-Italian operations against Great Britain.

For Mussolini to have taken France's North African colonies would have involved the dispersion of his forces at a time when such action might prove dangerous. For, while France is out of the war, Italy must still reckon with Great Britain. Furthermore, by insisting on demilitarized zones rather than actual occupation of Algeria and Tunisia the hand of the Bordeaux government is strengthened as against those elements, in the French colonies and elsewhere, which manifest a disposition to continue the fight. The statement of Gen. Nogues, French high commissioner to Morocco, that his troops would not yield one inch of French North Africa without a fight reveals the reality of this feeling.

If Germany is successful in her war against Great Britain, the colonies of the erstwhile Allies will be available for distribution. In the meantime, Mussolini feels there is wisdom in waiting.

Response To Emergency

Whatever the results of the balloting now fast approaching, the present Republican National Convention will long be notable for the phenomenal fight with which Wendell Willkie has electrified the Nation, and in particular the staid city of Philadelphia.

There is a deep significance in the way this highly unconventional campaigner has upset the dope and confounded the politicians in a city where boss rule and machine regularity have long been regarded as the essence of Republicanism. The swing toward Willkie, only augmented by every effort to impede it, is a triumph of public opinion over political manipulation. It represents a victory for the spirit of democracy over the forms by which that spirit is too often fettered and beaten down.

Four months ago no professional politician was giving Mr. Willkie any serious consideration as a possible candidate for the Presidency. Four weeks ago, when the Republican primaries had been tabulated, the name of Mr. Willkie was conspicuous by its absence from the lists. Even four days ago, when the delegates convened in Philadelphia, not more than a handful of them were willing to state publicly that Mr. Willkie was their choice.

Today, which is likely to decide the outcome in fact if not in law, the chief issue in the minds of an ever-growing number of the delegates is how soon they can with propriety climb on the bandwagon. Many were eager to get aboard even before Gov. Stassen of Minnesota, keynoter of the convention, announced yesterday afternoon that he would support Willkie on the first ballot. And that statement has eliminated many political inhibitions which were already rapidly wearing thin.

This slide of delegates from favorite sons and head-start candidates is not the result of secret conferences in smoke-filled rooms. Those have been more concerned with stopping than with supporting Mr. Willkie. The delegates, after all, are concerned only with the problem of naming a candidate likely to be elected. And the disposition of many to desert the aspirants to whom they are pledged is clearly caused by the pressure of a tidal wave of public opinion.

It is important, for those who believe in the processes of democracy, to ask why the Willkie boom has swiftly grown to proportions which appear to be sweeping actual control of the Philadelphia convention wholly out of the hands of the professionals. There seem to be four separate reasons, each connected with some trait in Mr. Willkie's character, which collectively make him appear to a vast number of voters as the ideal candidate at this critical period of national hysteria.

In the first place, the record of this candidate seems symbolic of that competence which all now realize must be developed in democratic government if it is to survive.

In the second place, this candidate's position gives ample evidence of that liberal social outlook which the most die-hard Republican now admits is essential to the regeneration of his party.

Thirdly, Mr. Willkie's refreshing candor, and the absence of any ties or commitments in his candidacy, provides a note to which a disillusioned electorate is deeply responsive.

And finally the courage of the man, attested by the way he is contesting a political race in which the odds against him seemed overwhelming, has captured the admiration of a people who admire guts, and know their practical value in the time of test.

All of the other candidates at Philadelphia have some of these four characteristics. Some of the others, perhaps, possess them all. But none, or so it seems to the close observers, possess these four imperative traits in so assured, so developed or so reliable a way as does Wendell Willkie.

The instinct of public opinion, when it is real opinion and not inflamed prejudice, is habitually sound. It is especially likely to be discerning when the safety of the Nation is involved.

In steadily and rapidly rising volume public opinion has been swinging to the support of Wendell Willkie as a man who can be counted upon to rise to the demands of a great emergency. And it is precisely because the delegates at Philadelphia are now very attentive to the instinctive movement of a jeopardized democracy that this Republican convention is so notable.

Child Refugees

The Gallup Poll indicates that American families are willing to care for more child refugees from England and France than could possibly be sent. Twenty-five per cent of those queried said they would take the youngsters into their homes if opportunity offered.

The fact that 54 per cent replied in the negative does not matter, for according to the poll the households that are open would accommodate at least 5,000,000 children. This circumstance lends encouragement to the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, formed last week to help the children as they arrive in Canada and to provide homes in this country for as many as can be admitted under the present laws.

On the general issue of permitting the French and British governments to send their children to haven in the United States, 58 per cent voted yes and 42 per cent no. This poll suggests that a large body of public opinion would support a change in the immigration laws to admit young refugees for residence in this country until the war is over.

Such relaxation need not be confused with the admission of adults for permanent residence. If individual Americans are willing to care for the refugees, and there are adequate guarantees of their repatriation at the end of the war, red tape should not be allowed to stand in the way.

When Friends Fall Out

In his address to the House of Commons last Tuesday, Premier Churchill helped to set straight the record of Franco-British relations on the eve of France's capitulation to Germany and Italy.

That world-shaking event has resulted in a bitter flood of recrimination between the two nations which, until this week, were comrades in arms. Mr. Churchill publicly expressed his "grief and amazement" over the action of the Petain government in putting its signature to the harsh and onerous armistice which, in effect, compels France to aid the Third Reich and Italy in their war against Great Britain.

This and other statements made in London, plus the activities of Gen. de Gaulle, undersecretary of war in the Reynaud cabinet, gave the impression that Great Britain was appealing to the French people, over the head of the Bordeaux government, to continue the struggle against the Axis powers. To this maneuver spokesmen of the Bordeaux regime replied with understandable bitterness. They accused Great Britain of having let France down by doing far less than her share in the common effort.

The British premier now reveals that he knew as far back as June 13 that French resistance was nearing its end. Although reluctant to release France from her obligations not to conclude a separate peace, he ultimately agreed to permit France to apply to Germany for an armistice, provided, however, that during the negotiations the French fleet would be sent to British ports. Solemn assurances to that effect were given him, he declares.

It was, therefore, with consternation that the British government learned of the armistice provision for the return of all French naval units to French ports there to be demobilized and disarmed. The only assurance that they will not be used against Great Britain is a pledge by the Axis powers to that effect. But such a pledge, as the British premier points out, is of dubious value. "Ask a half a dozen countries" he said, "what is the value of such solemn assurances by the German government."

Mr. Churchill admits that the French had little choice except to give up the struggle and that Great Britain has not "so far, endured equal trials or made an equal contribution." Nonetheless, fighting for their existence against desperate odds, the British are eager to keep the French spirit of resistance alive wherever that is possible—in the French fleet, in France's colonies and, possibly, in France itself.

This endeavor Mr. Churchill continues to pursue. To that end, while eschewing "hard words or reproaches," he announced on Tuesday that the British will aid to the best of their ability and resources "any movement of Frenchmen outside the power of the enemy to work for the defeat of German barbarism, for freedom and for the restoration of France."

Japan Eyes Indo-China

The collapse of France has created for Japan an opportunity which the island empire has been quick to capitalize.

Within 24 hours after the French armies had laid down their arms a squadron of Japanese warships entered the French Indo-China port of Haiphong. The official explanation of this move is that these warships are needed to "observe the movement" of vessels suspected of carrying munitions and supplies intended for the Chinese army.

A few days ago the French authorities agreed to prohibit such supplies from going over the railroad which runs from Indo-China to Yunnan province and which has been one of the few remaining transportation links between China and the outside world. But these assurances have apparently not satisfied the Japanese. With France beaten and helpless, some elements in Japan believe that the time has come to put Indo-China under Japanese "protection," at least for the duration of the European war. Pressure is also being put on the British to close the entrance to the Burma road.

If both of these routes to China are now cut off, the Chinese armies will be made completely dependent on their own meager resources plus the little they can get overland from Russia. They may thus be prevented from continuing a war which, after almost three years, the Japanese have not been able to win by military means. At least that is Tokyo's calculation. In the meantime, France's defeat threatens to upset the status quo all over the Far East.

Freedom For All

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Constitution of the United States provides that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech.' Most Americans heartily approve this civil liberty for which our forefathers struggled. Lately, however, I have noticed that many people would like to impair this guarantee and deprive all but two or three classes of persons of their freedom to express an opinion on the vital issue of whether our country should be at war or at peace.

I have heard many types of people, educated and otherwise, say that only those "who are of military age or the parents of sons of military age (in other words, those "directly affected") should express an opinion as to whether and under what circumstances we should be at war; and following this principle, the opinions of all others should be disregarded.

I suggest that this, in peacetime, is a serious infringement of the right to freedom of speech of a large portion of the people.

Rezoning Protested

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington is making serious mistakes in changing desirable, well-established residential locations into business locations.

I am an old Washingtonian and live in a downtown street which was a high-class residential section and is now cheapened by small stores there.

Washington is a growing city, but does not need ever so many business streets, uptown or downtown. Every change of it is a personal event and affects the homes of many people.

Congress And Bridges

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of June 15 on Subversive Action does not enter into all various angles in question. Congress is possessed of all the necessary evidence to show that Harry R. Bridges has carried out all the communistic principles as laid down by the Communist Party in Russia.

There is no room for Communists in this country, or for communist sympathizers, as they will turn against this country at the first opportunity. They cannot be trusted.

Congress is wholly wihin its rights, as laid down by the Constitution, to enact all necessary laws for the preservation of the Union. Congress has never yet passed any act forfeiting the rigths of citizenship to our people, except for due cause, and neither has any alien ever been deported without good and sufficient cause.

Boost For Walsh

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is reassuring to have so sound and stable a chairman in charge of the influential Naval Affairs Committee as Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts. The Democrats might do well to nominate him as one candidate who could be counted upon to keep us out of war, provided, of course, that Col. Knox is justified in his trustfulness that the President will refuse to run for a third term!

The Facts About Cuba

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to refer to Mr. Dixon Donnelley's article, "Cuba's Affiliations," published in yesterday's edition of The Washington Post.

While I recognize the objective and friendly spirit of his references to certain Cuban economic realities, I deem it dangerous in the present hysterical state of the international situation, to let pass unchallenged, the spreading of misconceptions which increase the confusion entertained by American public opinion in general, with regard to the problems and policies of the Latin American nations. As this article affects Cuba, I wish to call attention to some of the unfounded assertions observed therein.

Mr. Donnelley uses quite a well know technique when he states that according to rumors circulating in Cuba, Congressmen and businessmen "are publicly urging construction of air bases to be leased to Germany, unless the United States agree to take over additional defense sites in return for a 20-year sugar quota guaranteed against suspension and entailing reduction of the already low American duty." It is Mr. Donnelley's privilege to believe such fantastic inventions and to pass them on to his American readers. It is my duty to point out the falsity of this affirmation and I wish to fulfill it most categorically.

The author refers further, en passant, to "a nation which has defaulted its gold obligations" giving us further proof of the second handed nature of his Cuban information. In spite of circumstances well known to everybody—except, apparently to Mr. Donnelley—Cuba, after protracted negotiations, resumed the service of almost the totality of the so-called public works debt in 1938 ($75,000,000) and with respect to the small fraction corresponding to the gold obligations, continued and concluded the necessary and mutually satisfactory negotiations, so that today a bill to reestablish the service of the obligations is pending before the Cuban Congress. It should be added that the total foreign debt of Cuba slightly exceeds $129,000,000, and with the exception of the relatively small portion, I repeat it, corresponding to the gold obligations, that debt is being punctually served and practically all of it enjoys the highest quotations on the New York Stock Exchange.

The liquidation of the mortgage moratorium is not, as Mr. Donnelley says, being debated in the present presidential campaign in Cuba. The constituent convention in a transitory provision definitely settled the matter, as may be ascertained by consulting the Official Gazette of the Republic of Cuba, issue No. 392 of June 7, 1940.

The opinions of Mr. Donnelly with regard to Col. Batista are very much his own and need not be examined.

Finally, permit me to add that the position of Cuba with regard to present and future problems which the European war is creating for the Americas is clear and simple: her geographic position, historic and economic ties, and her own sincere national opinion, have bound her destinies to those of the United States, whatsoever emergency may threaten the American Continent.

Mr. Stimson's Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ernest Lindley shows once more in The Post of June 24 the blindness of those who have held to an isolationist and nationalist policy for the United States. Because the Japanese rape of Manchuria touched no immediate economic interest of the United States, he asserts that our national interest was not concerned in it. Therefore he blames Mr. Stimson's policy. Yet Mr. Lindley himself has recently shown how greatly the possible loss of the British fleet affects our national interest. It is by now a commonplace of political analysis that a strong, united stand by England and the United States would have checked Japanese adventuring and organized resistance to the successive acts of aggression by the dictators to the extent that they would never have taken place, and England would not now be in deadly peril.

Mr. Lindley's statement is reminiscent of Chamberlain's "Czecho-Slovakia is a far-off country of which we know nothing."

Against Intervention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Pipkin, speaking for the Junior Chamber of Commerce, says that American youth is prepared to make all sacrifices for purposes of defense. For whom does Mr. Pipkin presume to speak? For the thousands of unemployed youth, who have done nothing but sacrifice their health and happiness all along? For the thousands of organized youth who plainly feel this is not a purely defensive budget, and, therefore, does not deserve their wholehearted support at the expense of all other social legislation?

No, the youth of America have made it clear that they have not been taken in by all the fanfare for defense. They want their country adequately prepared for foreign invasion, but refuse to support a program which is clearly offensive—to be used to send them across the seas to die.

Bar To Labor Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The chief cause of continued failure of peace negotiations between the C. I. O. and A. F. L. seems to be overlooked by commentators in general. Reference is to the matter of dual State and city organizational setups, which are, of course, officered by the real powers in both organizations. And as the abolishment of duality would most certainly lead to the abolishment of numerous executive positions carrying excellent salaries and wielding great influence, we may not hope for peace in the labor world for some time. There will continue to be flourishes from both camps, but that is all. Executive self-interest is in the saddle and is riding hard.

Adjourn Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The time to adjourn politics is right now. In my opinion the man in the street views with disgust leaders and satellites of American political parties attacking each other just in order to make the headlines. Now, of all times we should have unanimity of purpose and spirit to meet the threatening enemies, within and without. What can and do our enemies think when they see daily attacks by members of Congress on each other and on high administrative officers and the President?

The Post Impressionist

Footnote To Science

It was 111 years ago today, on June 27, 1829, that James Smithson, founder of the institution that bears his name, died in the city of Genoa, Italy, at the arge of 64. The story is well known how this English chemist, the son of Sir Hugh Smithson who became the first Duke of Northumberland, left his fortune to the United States of America "to found at Washington an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." But the posthumous history of this great benefactor and the circumstances surrounding the removal of his remains to America are perhaps less familiar.

Smithson was buried at Genoa in a tomb in the little cemetery belonging to the English Church. We are told that it was a beautiful but solitary spot planted with cypress trees and situated on the Heights of San Benigno overlooking the Gulf of Genoa. Though on alien soil, it seemed a not incongruous resting place for this man who had lived the lonely and cheerless life that circumstances dealt him.

In 1891 the secretary of the Smithsonian, Samuel P. Langley, visited the Smithson tomb and on behalf of the institution arranged for the perpetual care of the grave. On a later visit Langley placed at the tomb a bronze tablet with a bas-relief of Smithson and another at the English Church. Up to this time the tomb bore no reference to Smithson as the founder of the Smithsonian Institution. The tablet placed at the tomb was afterward stolen.

Late in 1900 Secretary Langley received word from one of the officers of the English Church at Genoa that the cemetery on the San Benigno Heights was in danger of having to be moved, because of encroachment by a stone quarry, "which was slowly but scurely eating its way toward us from the sea through the rocky side of the hill on which we stand." What was to be done with James Smithson's remains? "Are they," inquired the letter, "to be laid with all possible care and reverence in new ground here, or are they to be conveyed to the United States?"

At first the Smithsonian board of regents thought it best to arrange for their reinterment at Genoa, but when it was learned definitely, just three years later, that the Italian authorities had actually expropriated the old cemetery and that it was certainly to be demolished, it was proposed to have the remains brought to America. This was urged particularly by the distinguished inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, one of the regents. Consequently Bell was appointed as a committee to take charge of the matter, and on December 15, 1903, with Mrs. Bell, he sailed for Europe on his memorable mission.

They arrived in Genoa on Christmas Day, and the removal was consummated without delay. Undisturbed for three-quarters of a century, the Smithson tomb was opened on December 31, 1903, in the presence of Bell, the United States consul and six other witnesses. "I was surprised," Bell is quoted as saying (Washington Post, January 24, 1904), "at the remarkable state in which the body was found. The skeleton was complete. The skull was that of an intellectual man. The bones had separated, but they did not crumble when exposed to the air."

On January 2, 1904, fitting ceremonies were held, after which the Smithson remains, in a new metal casket and strong wooden coffin, were put aboard the steamer Princess Irene of the North German Lloyd Line. After a stormy but otherwise uneventful passage, they arrived in New York on the night of January 19. The United States steamer Dolphin, by direction of President Theodore Roosevelt, completed the transport to the Navy Yard in Washington, arriving on Saturday, the twenty-third.

On Monday morning the coffin, draped in the American and the British flags, was borne from the Navy Yard through the city, accompanied by a troop of the Fifteenth Cavalry from Fort Myer, Va., the Marine Band, and a detachment of Marines, and deposited in the center of the main hall of the Smithsonian Institution. A distinguished company had gathered to pay honor to James Smithson, and appropriate and impressive ceremonies were conducted. There was one man present, N. P. Fowler, of Cleveland, who had also been present on a day 56 years before when the Smithsonian Building was dedicated.

It was agreed that Smithson's remains should have their final resting place somewhere on the grounds of the institution. While the site was being pondered, the original tomb from Italy was sent for. When this arrived late in 1904, however, it was found to be a very modest structure and thought to be insufficient for an external site. On March 6, 1905, Secretary Langley reported to the board of regents "that he had hoped that at some future time Congress would make an adequate appropriation for giving these remains a fitting interment; but that so far as he had been able he had given present effect to the mandate of the board by depositing them temporarily within the building in a small room which he had fitted up on the immediate left of the north entrance to the building." At the conclusion of this meeting the board proceeded to the room and witnessed the deposit of the casket and the sealing of the tomb.

In this small mortuary chapel today still lie the remains of James Smithson, whose faith in the then young republic, the United States of America, was the inception of a great scientific organization. As he prophesied, his name will abide "in the memory of man when the title of the Northumberlands and Percys are extinct and forgotten." The Smithsonion Institution is now nearly a century old, and the name of James Smithson is known, per orbem, by millions who may never have heard who he was.

A Decadent City

Philadelphia, June 26.

REGARDLESS of the choice of this very sober and apprehensive convention of the Republicans, regardless of their platform and man's fate in the Presidential election, the United States may come up with a moral and civic profit if the delegates and political foremen look about them, study the dilapidation of the city and realize who has been responsible for this decay. They are meeting amid very disquieting proof that democracy can stand just so much thieving, cynicism and incompetence but, at a certain point, like any of those fabulous iron men of pugilism, fails to respond to the smelling salts, the brandy or even a match burned under its nose.

As Republicans they should have their noses rubbed in the mess that has been made of a great American city, and made to realize, so that they may go home and tell the neighbors that it was the gang politics of the party that reduced Philadelphia to her present state of apathy and resignation.

Whether Philadelphia was overbuilt is beside the question. It probably is true that fast transportation has drawn considerable activity and business to New York that might have remained here. But it is also true that this city, like Chicago, Kansas City, Jersey City and many others in this nation, has been robbed of its money and, finally, of its vitality by succeeding generations of mobs of utterly bad and remorseless thieves, and reduced to the condition of a gaunt and feeble cow which has been drained of her blood by a million ticks.

THE CONDITION of Philadelphia today is such that even the racketeers are poor, and no underworld mobs exist. In fact, one of the most prosperous gangsters of the era of wonderful nonsense is reduced to running a cheap little dance hall, and another, in still more desperate shape, turned square and went into legitimate business in another city.

It was not reform that eradicated the underworld but poverty. There was nothing left for them to steal, and not even a leader of the American Federation of Labor could graft or extort more than a meager living here.

Of course, these delegates, like the rest of us, will have heard from time to time that dishonest and inefficient government tends to weaken the cities and states and, cumulatively, the Nation, but here they have spectacular proof. And, in a vague way, I sense that the individuals who sit at this convention, feeble as their voice may be in the counsels and decisions of the party, will be personally shocked to learn, at last, that it is literally true that there can come a time when a community can take no more punishment and yield no more loot. In the same vague, amateurish way I feel that the delegates in Philadelphia are conscious of a stir of civic and patriotic responsibility, induced, perhaps, by alarm and shock.

Neither machine is worse than the other, but the point I am gambling on is that these Americans will realize that machine politics which expose cities and states to robbery and exploitation for the machine's own sake finally can bring actual physical ruin. This convention, therefore, whoever the nominee may be and whatever the outcome of the election, may mark a turn of conscience regarding the political practices which have established a popular belief that in politics there must be graft, neglect and inefficiency in order that the machine may live and its workers may have contracts and phantom jobs on the public pay roll.

POSSIBLY I exaggerate the civic decency of these Republicans. A little conscience is an awful lot to expect of a party delegate or leader, and the temptation of a job or some petty, easy money has almost overpowered that little. But never in the lives of these people have delegates to a national convention had as much reason to feel that they personally, as individual citizens, were making a decision affecting the safety of a nation and the preservation of their right to vote and oppose the party in power. I think that feeling is responsible for the fact that whatever practical politicians and political writers say out of their long experience and cynicism, Wendell Willkie outscores all the other candidates, as a—let us say—celebrity, if you will not agree that he is worth serious consideration as a possibility. They may not select him, but they certainly have been looking him over, and there are shocking symptoms of independence among a gathering of citizens who in normal circumstances would follow orders even if it meant nominating another such Joe Nobody as Alf Landon.

The destruction wrought in Philadelphia and the normal and material harm done in Chicago by machine politics are [illegible] worse than the murder rates of those cities, which, incidentally, are enhanced by political corruption. So it seems foolish to execute murderers for personal, individual killings without providing the same punishment for politicians whose crimes tend to destroy the form of government for which the people have fought repeatedly and may have to fight again.

Youth Looks At G. O. P. Convention

TODAY I HAVE turned over this column to my husband's son, Mr. Wells Lewis. He is attending here in Philadelphia his first political convention, and in November he will cast his first vote for President. He is 22 years old, a graduate of Andover, and of Harvard, from which he was graduated a year ago.

Anxious to become familiar with various sections of the United States, he procured himself a job last fall as news editor of the Delta Democratic-Times, in Greenville, Miss., heart of the Mississippi delta.

He is a young American of better than usual education, whose income is what he earns—$20 a week.

FOR QUITE A LONG time and especially during this last year in which, as news editor for a small paper, the events of the world were compulsory reading for me in all their detail, I have attached myself to no one American political group. I have preserved that freedom of choice, that belief in one man here and another principle there, regardless of party, which is now generally characterized as the late nineteenth century liberal attitude.

My Red and neo-Red friends have called me reactionary; my down-the-ticket Republican friends have called me radical. Actually, I think I possess that "innocent" eye which grows in the skulls of so many copy-desk men who see too much news and read too many political speeches to believe in the infallibility of any single political party. And I think a great many other Americans, copy-desk men or not, have broken through party lines in the quest for men and principles whose virtue is not Republican nor old-style Democratic nor New Deal, but simply American.

I have, however, one strong prejudice. I would like to see this country survive as the America we know, and not either as a Hitler dependency or as a Fascist state itself—two possibilities I consider extremely possible. In this regard I admit my bias.

Accordingly, since I am unattached to any party, it was a natural thing for me to come to Philadelphia to see what men and principles I could find for my American collection. With all my admiration for the great heart and splendid imagination of Mr. Roosevelt, with all my realization that he is incomparably the biggest political figure of the day, I have been extremely disturbed in this crisis by the probable results of that gross inefficiency which has been displayed not only by certain New Deal henchmen but by the President himself in his position as executive head of a business: The business of operating the Government efficiently.

I have been afraid that his inability to delegate power effectively to his assistants would have a disastrous effect upon a period which demands national coordination. The knowledge that he preferred office boys who carried out the orders of himself and his group of imaginative (rather than practical) schemers to independent, critical assistants who might themselves criticize some of those ideas and produce some of their own—that knowledge was very disturbing.

THE DEATH OF FRANCE and the disaster involving the British Empire showed me, as it showed everyone else, that our most urgent problem was the rearming of this Nation. The fact that at present our Army is literally less well prepared than that of Switzerland is one which dwarfs all others, as a giant oak tree dwarfs surrounding clumps of poison ivy.

I saw that this Nation must be producing arms on a scale vastly superior to that of Germany—since Germany has Italian, Spanish, Japanese—and who knows what other friends that we have not—or the United States is unquestionably doomed.

I know that either the Nation's production must be completely socialized, so it is in the supremely efficient Nazi state, or the energy and genius of our industrialists must be at once encouraged to operate freely and be coordinated for material and social rearmament by some superior business executive; some one who knew how to delegate power to able, independent-minded associates.

When Roosevelt demanded 50,000 planes a year, I was very happy indeed. I thought that within the framework of our present Administration, salvation might exist. Then, in all too short a time, a Washington newspaper acquaintance of mine, a man generally sympathetic to the Government, told me one way in which the Government was seeking to secure those 50,000 planes.

A group of airplane manufacturers, big and small, had been told to drop whatever they were doing and come at once to Washington for a conference with Secretary Morgenthau about ways and means of production.

When they arrived at the assigned room, they found it so full of reporters and camera men that many of them had to remain outside in the hall. Morgenthau was photographed with a group of the manufacturers—and then disappeared. The manufacturers gathered together; to be told by an officer that unfortunately the exact details for conducting the conference had not been worked out and that they would all have to go home again, but that the Government would send for them when they were needed.

MOST OF THESE men have not been back to Washington.

In these two incidents, 50,000 planes over the radio one day, hopelessly inactivity the next, I saw an old story. In the President's own immortal words, they "brought up recollections."

So I went to Philadelphia to see if, in the other camps, that executive upon whose efficiency the safety of this Nation depends could be found. I knew, of course, that I wouldn't find him in Taft, a man admittedly living in the era of 1812; or in Thomas Dewey, a man who gets even more angry and pettish when contradicted by his assistants than Roosevelt himself.

But in Wendell Willkie I had reason to believe that the Nation could use a man whose executive efficiency, whose ability to delegate and coordinate power, whose considerable personal humility in the presence of persons whom he knows to be better acquainted with a given field of information than himself, have all been proved in the control of his own immense industrial complex. In that man I hoped to find the means for crystalizing the energies of this country in the essential way in which they were not crystalized in France and Great Britain until it was too late.

I also wanted to look at a lot of Republicans, because whoever should be our next President, these were Americans who would have to work with him to continue our fight in saving this Nation.

With these ideas in mind I took my place in Convention Hall and gathered together with the considerable number of political figures and news commentators into whose circle my contacts brought me.

And last night, as I listened to the end of the second major convention speech—Hoover's—I concluded that if these speakers and these people who applauded them were representative of the Republican Party, that party was as dead as the dodo.

For to be as unprepared in mind as in material arms for the conditions in which we now live is, with Hitler on the loose, to be in a sense already dead.

And I concluded that unless the rest of the country is very much more aware of what is happening, this Nation is doomed. Wendell Willkie may still be the Executive to save this country (if it is still here to be saved next January), but he will do so only by complete independence from the attitude and program of the party in which he is seeking nomination.

FOR ONE THING, I fancied that while the French navy was handed over and the British navy thus almost nullified, in the headlines being sold just outside Convention Hall, I would hear some one saying something. Instead, as always seems to happen on the eve of destruction, I got complacent speeches. Gov. Stassen, after speaking for half his time in a fine, resonant voice and saying in effect nothing whatever, did finally make one practical commitment. He said that he was against compulsory military training. He said that he would trust to the influences of the home, the family and the church for all necessary disciplines.

Now, with my attachments to nineteenth-century principles, I yield to no one in my admiration for home, family and church. But none of those authorities would seem to be equiped to teach our youth to shoot machine guns—which is something they must know.

Our Regular Army is being expanded at an insufficient rate; and, as 1917 youth proved, youth never volunteers in sufficient numbers these days to meet the immediate demands of modern warfare. England—more jealous of personal liberty in some ways than we—adopted universal conscription with general acclaim; and adopted it too late. But Gov. Stassen's one practical observation was that this country, though arming herself, must not teach our youth what to do with those arms.

And former President Hoover, whom I have admired in many ways, was even worse. He talked about "that war over there" as if it were the Crimean War or the Boer War. He asked for complete freedom for industry when obviously our sources of production should—in this crisis—only be free within a framework for national defense; and he suggested that when Europe settles into a temporary peace, we must pour our resources and goods into Mr. Hitler's hands for the building up of his new empire, hoping that such a gesture will soften his dear, dear heart.

So I shall leave Philadelphia with hopes for Wendell Willkie, either as Republican nominee—should he be selected—or as a man whom President Roosevelt might well summon to Washington to assist him in the details of executive coordination.

But to the Republican Party as it sits in Convention Hall, I say goodby.

Mr. Hoover And The Platform

Philadelphia, June 26.

ABOUT WAR and foreign relations, the Republicans tried to define the undefinable. Literally that. They tried to write a platform plank which would stand up in a hundred future contingencies—all unknown, all arising out of the unpredictable spasms of a world of convulsion.

On war and foreign relations, there was never but one good line for the Republican platform. Former President Hoover saw it when in his address he said:

"In a few days, this convention will have chosen our national leader (that is, nominee for President). The President (Mr. Roosevelt) will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon these transcendant question."

That was a remarkable declaration of Mr. Hoover's. Hardly anything like it ever occurred before. In effect, Mr. Hoover was saying that from day to day events in Europe will take turns—and darts and dashes and plunges—which no one can foresee; that these sudden developments will concern the United States; that in the face of them our Government will have to take steps of one kind or another; that no one can know in advance what the appropriate step would be in each unforeseeable case; and that if President Roosevelt, if he acts on each occasion, would like to have the views of the opposition party, he should consult the as yet unknown Republican Presidential nominee.

That suggestion of Mr. Hoover was extraordinary—but we live in a time when only the extraordinary is realistic.

If the spirit of that suggestion—which is the only practicable thing to do under the circumstances—had been written into the Republican platform, the plank on war and foreign relations might read somewhat as follows:

"We, the Republican Party, are asking the country to elect us to power next November, and install us in power next January. We are asking for the job of managing the United States for a period of four years. During that four years, and also between now and January, there will occur in Europe and elsewhere events which will affect the United States, and which will call on the United States for appropriate actions.

"Under these conditions we refuse to foist upon the public the pretense that we, here in Philadelphia, in June, 1940, can write a statement of policy about war and foreign relations which will adequately provide for each and every emergency and condition which may arise during four years until 1944.

"We therefore say simply: That if entrusted with power we will meet each situation as it arises; that we will treat each situation with the best intelligence we possess, taking into account the conditions at the time; and that in each situation we will act in accord with the best interests of the United States."

No doubt a political party would fear to write such a plank. They might fear it would lay them open to jeering charges of "evasion." But in fact such a declaration would be simple candor and truth. Precisely that program, or that lack of program, is the course that will be followed, regardless of what party is in power, or what individual is the next President.

This is a serious-minded convention, the personnel of delegates exceptionally conscious of responsibility. One wished them well, and knew they would do their best. Yet, repeatedly you were conscious of how much events are beyond their power.

You left a session of the convention, and got back to the hotel late. You picked up a midnight issue of the following morning's Philadelphia Inquirer. In it you read in a headline equalling that of the convention, something about Europe, the future of the French navy. And you felt the future of the French fleet might have, in some distant development, consequences to America as great as anything this convention can write into a platform.

Yet one got assurance from the high level of things down here. The elevation of former President Hoover's speech, regardless of agreement or disagreement about details of it; and the sense of character and dependability in Mr. Hoover's personality as he stood before the convention, all suggested a passage from Marveil's oration ode on Cromwell:
He nothing common did, nor mean,
Upon that memorable scene.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Black Tuesday In Philadelphia

ON TUESDAY in Philadelphia things were done behind the scenes. All the details are not available but by midnight on Tuesday the general shape of the action was evident.

The men who control the machinery of the Republican party had changed the foreign policy of the party in an effort to prevent the nomination of Wendell Willkie.

UP TO MONDAY evening the Republican position on foreign affairs was the position taken by Governor Stassen in his keynote address. In substance the position was that the party would "frankly state to the people that we can neither fully anticipate these problems (in foreign affairs) nor can we tie our hands before meeting them." A platform consistent with this sensible declaration had, so it was understood, been agreed upon.

But during Monday Mr. Willkie's strength not only in the country but among the delegates was mounting rapidly, and there was strong evidence that if the delegates were left to follow their own inclinations they would turn to Willkie as much the strongest candidate available in the party. In domestic affairs Mr. Willkie's demonstrated capacity as an industrial organizer is obviously a great political asset at a time when organization is indispensable to the national security, when the severest charge that can be brought against the New Dealers is that they are not themselves organizers or friendly to the industrial managers of the country. As compared with Mr. Dewey who has never had any experience in industry and practically none in public affairs, as compared with Mr. Taft, who also has had no experience in industrial management and a very limited experience in public affairs, Mr. Willkie's qualifications were truly impressive. The point was obvious and the delegates were rapidly taking it into account.

In foreign affairs the position of Mr. Willkie is plainly consistent with the prevailing sentiment of the great majority of the people. It was expressed by Gov. Stassen when he said that "the world is constantly changing" and that the "future welfare" of the Nation "cannot best be served by simply burying our heads in the sand." It was evident to a growing number of the delegates that both Mr. Taft and Mr. Dewey had their heads deeply buried in the sand. So the movement for Willkie threatened to sweep the convention.

THIS PROSPECT did not, of course, please the political workers around Messrs. Taft, Dewey and Vandenberg. Still less did it please the party bureaucracy or the Republican old guard. For they did not create Willkie and he is not, therefore, their creature. They rallied to destroy him. On Tuesday they went into action. They stirred up sectional animosity by raising the issue of the reciprocal treaties though Mr. Hoover himself confessed that the principle of these treaties was academic while Europe and Asia were totalitarian. Professing to deplore the New Deal incitement to class feeling, they attacked Mr. Willkie because there are rich people who support him—a most despicable attack in view of the fact that there are many more rich men and much more powerful private interests behind Taft and Dewey. Then, having denounced the New Deal because it was hostile to business, they attacked Mr. Willkie because he was the successful head of a large ultility corporation.

BUT THEIR FINAL attack was launched by modifying overnight the position taken by their keynote orator and their platform committee—the position that the party would not "tie our hands" in the presence of momentous and unpredictable events. They set out to "strengthen" the isolationists' committment in the platform and generally — through the speeches of the permanent chairman, Mr. Martin, and later of Mr. Hoover—to bind the party to negative pledges so tightly that the convention would not be able to nominate Willkie without repudiating its own platform.

All day Tuesday they fussed and fidgeted with a revision of the platform. Why? Because they were adapting it to changing events in Europe and Asia? Not at all. They were not thinking of foreign affairs, but only of how a plank on foreign affairs could be used to defeat Willkie and to perpetuate their own control of the party machinery. Mr. Hoover's part in this is not entirely clear. He seems to have wavered all day, revising the section of his speech on foreign affairs while the rest of his speech was already in the hands of newspapermen, and modifying considerably what he finally did give out to the press when he actually came to deliver his speech.

The net effect of the whole day's proceedings was to make the position of the party on Tuesday fundamentally different from what it had been on Monday. The difference lay in the fact that on Monday the party was willing to trust the judgment of the nominee and on Tuesday it decided to tie his hands. Thus those who have had the sad duty of attending this depressing convention were compelled to witness the use of foreign policy not merely for partisan purposes, which would have been bad enough in all conscience, but for factional purposes within the party, and that, if I may say so, is the end of the limit.

UNTIL the FINAL judgment is known, one must not pass final judgment on the convention. We have seen a maneuver of the professionals; there are still the delegates and the voters to be heard from. The fundamental issue is, therefore, still undecided. But the issue is now as clear as it is simple. There is a struggle at Philadelphia between a group of professional politicians at headquarters and the rank and file of the delegates and voters of the party. Given half a chance, freed from the maneuvers and tricks of the professionals, these delegates would, in the great majority, turn to Willkie as the man obviously best fitted to the circumstances of the hour. In any open debate with any other candidate he would win easily on the merits; in any disinterested comparison he would be preferred by almost all the Republicans who would like to win the election by deserving to win it. But the opposition of the professionals is formidable and they showed on Tuesday what methods they are prepared to use.

If they win here in Philadelphia, the Republicans of the country will find that something essential to the American Republic as we have known it has perished here. That something is orthodox political conservatism in American politics. It will have perished because the professional Republican politicians, who are the trustees of political conservatism, have sacrificed it to a factional intrigue. They have shown here to all intelligent conservatives who have watched them at work that they do not understand what are the vital interests that must be conserved and, worse still, that they do not have the resolution needed to defend those vital interests if they understood them. They talk about preserving the American social order and they have not given ten minutes' useful thought to the problem of how that is to be done in the world as it is now. They talk about national defense, but I think no objective observer here has been convinced that they are seriously interested in it, and that, put to the test, they will not retreat and surrender rather than make a national effort.

But without insight and without courage, with nothing but complaints about others and complacency about itself, conservatism as a political force is doomed. It has nothing to offer the Nation—neither hope for the future nor protection in the present. Here in Philadelphia political conservatism is on the verge of destroying itself, and of forcing nationally-minded Americans to look elsewhere for a party to represent them.

Communist Cinema

ALBERT MALTZ'S first full-length novel—"The Underground Stream" (Little, Brown, $2.50)—might, with a few minor changes, have been about an early Christian martyr. It happens to be about a Communist automobile worker in Detroit. It happens also to be a swift-paced dramatic novel. Mr. Maltz first made his name on Broadway; learned in the theater the importance of pace and action. He won, in 1938, the O. Henry Memorial Award for short-story writing; that year Richard Wright and John Steinbeck were merely runners-up. Maltz is 31 years old; he can write; and the Communist Party, apparently, is his religion.

"The Underground Stream" is the story of Fred Prince, 32 years old, very much in love with his wife, a union organizer in the Jefferson Motor Works and a Communist Party worker, and of Jeffrey Gregg, personnel director of Jefferson Motors and head of its secret police, a big, self-made man with a taste for women and a contempt for little men, whatever their origins or outlooks. The scene is Detroit in February, 1936, before the great automobile strikes and the effective organization of the union.

Princey earned $1.05 an hour as a "tool-and-die slob," and felt lucky because during the year he had had 35 weeks' work. His wife, Betsey, a laundry worker wanted to see a bit more in the bank before they risked a baby. Princey read the party literature about "steeled revolutionists," but he wasn't quite steeled. He didn't want to go to a party school and become a party organizer at $8 a week, if there was that much in the party treasury; he wanted Betsey and he wanted babies. He didn't know much about Karl Marx; he had joined the Communist Party after Gregg's service men had turned the fire hoses on him and 15,000 others who had waited through an icy night at the employment gate. Hatred had made him join the Communists; but in the party he had discovered a purpose and a meaning for his life.

MR. MALTZ'S conception of the Communists is very different from Congressman Dies', and it is probably based upon more intimate experience. He does not make them all unmitigated heroes. Princey himself is unreliably adventurous; some of the group are just plain dumb; Ambrose Bishop is a stoolpigeon released from prison on parole and sent into the party to spy upon it for Jeff Gregg. Turner, the organizer, is a Utopian dreamer who lives on a dream of a future when "the unnecessary pain of mass existence under this period of capitalism" itself will seem merely a bad dream. Jesse Vandermill, Princey's bodyguard, is a man of immense physique but emotionally insecure; for the first time in his life he found a sense of self-respect and of usefulness in membership in the Communist Party. And in that sense of dignity in belonging to a large whole he is—and this I am not sure Mr. Maltz intended to say—very like Harvey Kellog and the other members of his anti-Communist hatchet gang, who felt their inadequate personalities buttressed by membership in the Black Legion.

"The Underground Stream" is head and shoulders above the "proletarian novels" of recent years both in originality of conception and in dramatic power. It is terse, earthy, exciting. It makes, to be sure initial assumptions that most of us are unwilling to accept; it identifies the "integrity" and "self-respect" toward which Princey, works with acceptance of Communist Party "discipline," without ever discussing the goals toward which that discipline is directed. But the larger theme—"man does not live by politics alone," but yearns for identification with something larger than himself—is the stuff of which great novels are made. Drop the specific terminology, and Mr. Maltz might be writing about religion or patriotism, which is a modern form of religion.

The Once Over

Cabinet Meeting

The President.—Gentlemen, these are your two new cabinet associates Mr. Knox and Mr. Stimson.

Secretary Hopkins.—Pinch me; I still think I'm dreaming.

Secretary Ickes.—I was positive this was coming.

Mr. Hopkins.—What made you positive?

Mr. Ickes.—The boss's statement that he wasn't even considering it.

Mr. Knox.—I feel strange here, don't you, Henry?

Mr. Stimson.—No; I'm equally uncomfortable anywhere.

Mr. Knox.—Gosh, I never thought I'd land in a Democratic administration.

Mr. Stimson.—If you're surprized, imagine my amazement!

Mr. Ickes.—Why should either of you be surprised? A Republican is apt to wind up anywhere. Look at me!

Mr. Knox (still incredulous)—It seems funny here when I think I ran on the ticket in opposition to Roosevelt.

Mr. Ickes—That was no opposition!

The President—Now Frank and Henry, you know all the boys. There's Mr. Morgenthau who has charge of all the money.

Mr. Morgenthau — All what money?

The President—And you all know Harold Ickes. Harold, are you surprised to find Frank Knox here?

Mr. Ickes—No. I always said Republicans make the best Democrats.

The President—You all know Miss Perkins. She is the Secretary of Labor.

Miss Perkins—Did he say is or WAS?

The President—And you know Harry Hopkins, the Secretary of . . . of . . . what are you secretary of, Harry?

Mr. Hopkins—I lost all track of that.

The President—And there's Mr. Hull.

Voice—I propose that the Cabinet now sing "Hull, Hull, the Gang's All Here."

Mr. Hull—Who was that?

The President—I left my radio on. It was from the Republican convention.

Mr. Stimson—Well, Mr. President, I am anxious to get to work as Secretary of War. There is much to be done. I assume I am to have full authority there.

The President—You'll find out.

Mr. Knox—I think I'll go over to the Navy Department at once and get things going.

The President—I'll be right with you.

Mr. Knox—That's what I'm afraid of.

(A boy enters and hands Mr. Stimson a telegram.)

Mr. Stimson (reading it)—It's from Philadelphia. It says, "Come back and all will be forgiven."

Mr. Knox (as the boy hands him a wire)—I've got one from the Republican convention too.

All—What's it say?

Mr. Knox—It's signed by John Hamilton and says, "Dear Frank: I never thought you'd have to go that far to get away from the 1936 election returns."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 26.

Don't crowd—a new young Gable is among us. His name is Richard Webb. He's 24, 6 feet two, weighs 190 pounds. As a kid, he studied to be a minister in Ohio. Before completing that course, joined the army, and was sent to Colon, Panama, where, after preaching a sermon, the boys decided he was an actor. And for two years he put on the Saturday night plays for the soldiers. When his time was up, his battalion put their heads together, collected $820, sent him to Hollywood. He was discovered by Don Dilloway, another actor who's turned agent, at one of our small theaters here, was taken to RKO, tested, and George Abbott has put him in "Too Many Girls."

Some of our splashing stars might like to know how Fred Allen does it. He and Portland have a two-room apartment. She does the cooking. They like it that way. They have no car, Fred has never had a valet, and they have no maid. They rely on friends' cars or taxis when going places. Benny talks about being stingy—is Allen trying to beat him at that, too?

Virginia Dale is set for a part in the Allen-Benny picture. She was in "Buck Benny Rides Again," and there were so many letters asking about her that they're now giving her a build-up Imagine a build-up between these comics! Like trying to be head wife to "Brigham Young."

More and more we look to radio for picture personalities and directors. For years Frank Woodruff produced the Lux Theater. He directed a picture for Cliff Reid called "Cross Country Romance," which brings Gene Raymond back. It's a mighty entertaining picture, with loads of laughs. Gene Raymond's fans will pick up where they left off. It's the best thing I've seen Wendy Barrie do. Billy Gilbert is always terrific, G P. Huntley, jr. deserves better parts. And there's a woman named Hopper, first name Hedda, who isn't bad.. I don't say she's good, but she ain't bad.

Mary Livingstone's new nose has not only given her a new face which is glamorous, but a personality to go with it. In fact, it's changed her whole outlook on life. I wonder if the same thing will happen to Orson Welles. Guess not, 'cause his is made of putty.

Bill Seiter's six-year-old son Chris and Irene Dunne's girl, same age, were playing house together in Irene's garden. They dressed up like their elders, played mamma and papa. The Dunne child started to take off her clothes, and said, "I'm now going to the studio." Chris said, "Don't be silly—only papas work. Mammas stay home and take care of the babies."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 28 (INS).—When that grand old actor Maurice Moscovich died suddenly the other day he left RKO in a spot. Moscovich was playing a temperamental dance maestro in "Dance, Girl, Dance," and had already done four days' work. Naturally his incompleted scenes had to be scrapped, and for the past week Director Dorothy Arzner, and Producer Erich Pommer have been trying frantically to find an actor to replace him. No one seems to fill the bill, so they've decided to solve the problem by making the character a woman, rewriting the role, and handing it to Maria Ouspenskaya!

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Since the part is an important one, it will take considerable revamping. Meanwhile Miss Arzner continues shooting other sequences with Maureen O'Hara, Lucille Ball and Louis Hayward.

Director Kurt Bernhardt, who has been begging Warners to give him Eddie Albert for his next picture, "The Stuff of Heroes," won't have to beg any more. Since "My Love Came Back" was previewed night before last, the whole town has been raving about Bernhardt's direction. He elicited great work from Albert, Olivia de Havilland and Jeffrey Lynn and the preview audience gave thunderous approval to the picture. So now he'll have Albert whom he considers a young Spencer Tracy, as his star for "The Stuff of Heroes." Story is by Ivan Goff who drew top writing credit on "My Love Came Back." Bernhardt is also slated to direct Miriam Hopkins in a film-biography of Mrs. Leslie Carter, and I understand Miriam, who wasn't too enthused when his name was first suggested, is now all for him.

If Eugenie Leontovich has her way, Twentieth Century-Fox will purchase Paul Horgan's Harper's prize novel, "The Fault of Angels," as a vehicle for her. Story concerns a Russian woman who marries the director of the orchestra in a Midwest town. Leontovich talked to Author Horgan during her New York jaunt and is now using all her powers of persuasion on Darryl Zanuck. If Darryl capitulates, it will be the second yarn he has bought for Leontovich since her great job in "Four Sons." "We Who Gave" was acquired several weeks ago.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Even if Dick Watts did dash out here from New York to see her, Gene Tierney is still spending considerable time with Eddie Albert. They were at the Bublichki t'other eve; Arleen Whelan and Alex D'Arcy, who split up after being very, very, very romantic, are dating again. They went to see "Our Town" together; Claudette Colbert has just received word from her aunt and uncle who live 10 miles outside Paris, that they are safe. It's her first news of them since France was invaded.

Judy Garland, at the Casa Manana with Dave Rose, refused to be photographed with him, saying her heart was still with Bobby Stack; Bob, however, has been buying sandwiches at the Gotham for Esme O'Brien; Alice Faye is out of the hospital and convalescing at her Encino home; Gladys George and Leonard Penn, home from their Broadway stint in "Ladies in Waiting," supped at the House of Murphy; the entire Rathbone clan—Basil, Ouida and Baby Cynthia—bedded with flu.

Kay St. Germain and Jack Carson (he was good in "Destry Rides Again") have set August 14 as the fatal day; Alan Curtis paying devoted attention to Ilona Massey at the Little Hungary. He says she's the one and only lady in his life; Edgar Bergen leaves Sunday for a two-week vacation in New York; George Jessel has bought a house in Bev Hills and will settle there permanently—with his Lois, of course, and you should see the new diamond necklace she's sporting.

Nightie Worn By Paulette Brings $350

The latest style news from Hollywood includes the information that the price of nightgowns has gone "sky high!"

When Paulette Goddard, currently co-starring in "The Ghost Breakers", with Bob Hope, donated one of her filmiest, flimsiest night gowns for an auction at a charity ball in New York, she not only helped the needy Finns but she [illegible] into the life of the man who bid up to $350 for the privilege of taking that night gown home with him.

The gentleman in possession of Miss Goddard's night gown has turned out to be a high official in the Eastern office of one of the largest airway companies. He has communicated with Paulette at Paramount Studio and offered to return the night gown provided he may be allowed to do so in person.

What with Hollywood being the style center of the world these days, fashion scouts claim that all this night gown banter has resulted in a large manufacturer of such garments wiring Paulette that the royalties will be large if she'll allow this particular gown to be copied.

The manufacturers feel that any nightie worth $350 for any cause may be just what that industry needs to run the prices right up to the clouds.

At the same auction, Hedy Lamarr's laciest evening kerchief, Garbo's autographed gloves from "Ninotchka," Barbara Stanwyck's monogrammed pink-satin mules and other bits of personal wardrobe from the glamour girls brought in amounts anywhere from $10 to $50.

Honor Comes to the Man Who Inspired Great Play

William L. White 'Plaqued' by Headliners; William Holden Says Good Word for 'Arizona;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

WILLIAM L. WHITE will be presented with a silver plaque by the National Headliners Club this Saturday night, in recognition of an outstanding journalistic achievement signalized by his broadcast last Christmas Day from Finland. It was called "The Last Christmas Tree" and provided Robert E. Sherwood, eminent playwright, the inspiration for his latest and greatest stage success, "There Shall Be No Night," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are the stars. Mr. White is the son of William Allen White, the "Sage of Kansas," editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette.

BELL.

The National Headliners Club, an organization of newspaper correspondents, radio news commentators and newsreel photographers, has delegated Arthur T. Robb, editor of Editor and Publisher, the "Bible" of the Fourth Estate, to make the award to Mr. White—along with journalistic awards to others—at the Headliners Frolic in Atlantic City.

Mr. White's broadcast was comparatively short, as such things go, but it was vididly grim and infinitely pathetic—and heroic. It was the spirit of the Finnish troops as reflected in Mr. White's 1,000 words or so, rather than any incident recited in them, that prompted Mr. Sherwood to write his play. That alone would be worth the plaque—only it ought to be of gold.

William Holden, a visitor to Washington not so many months ago and the young fellow who smacked the public right betwixt the eyes in "Golden Boy," on the screen, and soon will be seen in the film version of "Our Town," chucked a glossy print postcard of the "Old West" into the mailbox in Tucson, Ariz., on June 22, and, sure enough, it got here, saying this: "Jean Arthur, Warren William, myself and about 2,000 others have been doing scenes like this for three months for 'Arizona' and we promise you a swell picture when it's released. Regards." This is unique in that it's really Bill writing this time and not a press agent. Yeah, I checked up on his signature!

B. M. Clark, the optimistic publicist of the enterprise, drops a line to say that the Cape Theater, Cape May, N. J., will present Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance" the week of July 1, with Julie Haydon and Florenz Ames in the leading roles. There can be no quibbling about Miss Haydon in the role which she created opposite Sir Cedric Hardwicke in the original Eddie Dowling production, but Mr. Ames, in the Hardwicke part, might be a little harder to reconcile. However, if anyone in the world is entitled to a break, it is Florenz Ames. He did a lot of bad guessing last season. First he pulled out of the cast of "DuBarry Was a Lady," a smash hit, to appear in the late Sidney Howard's ill-starred "Madame, Will You Walk," ostensibly starring George M. Cohan—who withdrew from the cast after a fortnight. Then Florenz came back with George M., in his own "Return of the Vagabond," another bloomer. I hope he knocks 'em dead, as the perplexed cleric in the Carroll piece.

The Fourth of July will be especially celebrated at the Earle Theater by the introduction of a new song for the first time on any stage. This latest of patriotic numbers is "I Am an American," by Ira Shuster, one of the foremost native song writers, and will be sung by Garfield Swift, Washington barytone, featured in the "Biff, Bang, Boom" revue opening tomorrow. This concession to the Earle is occasioned by the long-standing friendship between Mr. Shuster and Managing Director Harry Anger.

Speaking of stage bills, the Rhythm Rockets will be back at Loew's Capitol for the week beginning tomorrow with a batch of new dance routines and to provide background for the ballet numbers offered by the incomparable Harriet Hoctor, coheadlining the stage program with Sheila Barrett, the incorrigible "impressionist."

Jack Benny will interrupt his Hawaiian vacation and intern his equanimity with a short stint for Paramount when he puts in a personal appearance at the Honolulu opening of his latest picture, "Buck Benny Rides Again," at the Waikiki Theater tomorrow night. Upon his return to Hollywood, the taciturn Mr. Benny will begin work in "Love Thy Neighbor," his picture with Fred Allen and Mary Martin. That one ought to have more "ribs" in it than a Potomac shad.

Dots and Dashes

Praise of press and public alike is being won by Harriet Freeman, of Washington, currently appearing in "The Queen Was in the Parlor," at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, Pasadena, Calif. . . . Play climaxes the season's offerings by the post-graduate acting company of the famous institution . . . Miss Freeman has been there three years, running the gamut—as the saying goes—from Greek tragedy to Broadway farce. . . . Bob Stickney, the Earle's old nimble-fingers at the keyboard, is recovering from an emergency appendectomy, performed in Georgetown Hospital Monday night . . . That Pete Smith I. Q. screen quiz test we were telling you about a few days back will be on the bill with "New Moon," at Loew's Palace, beginning tomorrow . . . For example, what's an aptenodyte? . . . See, wha'd I tell you? . . . Eileen Ritter's next "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike," at the Earle, will go red, white and blue in honor of the Fourth . . . Izetta Jewel, jr., most popular of last summer's guest stars at the Cross Roads Theater, returns to the Virginny barn next Monday night to play in "A Woman's a Fool," second light comedy of the Bailey's Cross Roads season . . . Max Brand, who has authored six of the "Dr. Kildare" pictures, is getting out of the laboratory and operating room . . . His next will be an original "Tarzan" yarn for Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan . . . Also for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, of course . . . Let's see, that makes how many "Tarzans" since Edgar Rice Burroughs thought up the idea?

Film Teams Are Big Hit

Hollywood, since its earliest days, has known that in union there is not only strength, but boxoffice.

Since the time of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bane, there has been a series of teams whose cinematic adventures have proven of great interest to the ticket-buying public.

Wallace Reid and Gloria Swanson formed a great romantic team. So did John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, and Rod La Rocque and Vilma Banky, who carried their screen romance right to a real altar.

Possibly first of the comedy teams was that of Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels, who appeared in a number of pictures together. Wallace Beery and the late Marie Dressler were another favorite combination.

Teams still go right along today. William Powell and Myrna Loy furnish annual entertainment in their "Thin Man" series. Paramount united Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard in "The Cat and the Canary," and found the public so pleased with the whole thing that the pair were cast right back again in "The Ghost Breakers," and they're scheduled for more chills and thrills. The new film finds them galloping through a haunted castle on an island near Cuba.

Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton have provided comedy in the "Blondie" series. In the straight dramatic and romantic line, Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll have proven an effective attraction. Fred doesn't appear with Madeleine in "Safari," or "North West Mounted Police," but they are scheduled to be joined together soon.

Dick Powell and Joan Blondell appeared together several times while they were at Warner Brothers, and eventually married. Then Paramount reunited them in "I Want a Divorce"—which has nothing to do with their private lives.

Don Ameche and Alice Faye are a popular combination, and have toiled together in numerous films, although Ameche has broken away now and again to work with Claudette Colbert and Loretta Young.

Dorothy Lamour and Robert Preston formed a team for "Typhoon," and they'll doubtless make more South Sea pictures together. All in all, the producers are constantly on the lookout for effective team work, for it appears to mean dollars in the till.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 26.

THIS STORY was brought to America last week by a friend of Lady Queensbury's: In the lobby of Claridge's, Lady Queensbury saw a bedraggled French officer, wearing a tattered uniform. His face was bearded, and that portion of it which showed revealed him to be the weary but still recognizable Marquis de la Falaise, ex-husband of Gloria Swanson and now estranged from his current wife, Constance Bennett. . . . "You look terrible," Lady Queensbury told him. "What happened to you?" . . . The Marquis then explained—that he had fought at Flanders, and was one of those fortunate enough to escape by wading into the sea to board a rescue ship. On his way to the ship, the Marquis was so fatigued that he decided it was impossible to continue, and sank beneath the waves. "But just then," he confessed, "I suddenly realized that if I died, Connie Bennett would wear widow's weeds, and receive sympathetic publicity—as the widow of one of the heroic dead. So I gathered renewed strength, and made the boat."

TALLULAH BANKHEAD will start her first summer theater tour next week, at the Maplewood Theater, where she will appear in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Romney Brent is directing the play . . . When Brent saw Tallulah, and said, "How shall we begin?" the star simplified the matter. "Look here," she stated, "I have a certain amount of beauty. I have a certain amount of talent. And I have a certain amount of friends who'll come to see me. The rest is up to you.

LAURENCE OLIVIER and Vivien Leigh, who were wavering between returning to England or remaining here—inasmuch as Duff Cooper had canceled their summons to London—are leaving for California . . . Saturday night, when The Revuers appeared on N. B. C.'s full-hour television program, the unbilled stranger who turned the pages for the accompanist was Aaron Copland, the noted American composer . . . M. W. Fodor, the veteran foreign correspondent, returned to America last week-end, and went to the home of John Gunther—one of the only two people he knows in N. Y. There he found a surprise—Mrs. Fodor, whom he last saw in London, months ago.

PROF. MORTIMER ADLER, author of "How to Read a Book," participated in a round-table conference with H. V. Kaltenborn and Clifton Fadiman . . . Adler and Fadiman disagreed with Kaltenborn, whose rage kept mounting, and who finally compared the current hostilities to the Thirty Years War, which finally ended in 1648 when the Peace of Westphalia gave Alsace to France . . . "That was 300 years age," said Kaltenborn, "and how is the warfare different?" . . . "But then," Fadiman replied, "the world didn't have you reporting it."

ELLIOT NUGENT, star and co-author of "The Male Animal," has been overwhelmed by insurance and annunity salesmen, investment schemes and pleas for charitable contributions—as the result of a story which appeared here last week, concerning his having $200,000. With forgivable apologies to Ogden Nash, Nugent replied to all of them in this way:

If I had $200,000 that I didn't know what to do with,
I would certainly give it to the Red Cross or Uncle
Sam to buy airplanes and what was left I might even use to give to you with.
But unfortunately, while the wolf is not exactly at my door,
I have plenty of bills to pay on July one, two, three and four.
And so, dear friend, although I am very sorry about your personal jam,
I am not the Man You Think I Am.
And when next you seize your pen,
Please do not believe more than ninety-nine and two-thirds per cent of what you read in The Lyons Den.

NELSON DOUBEDAY, the book publisher, has a perfectly good manuscript which he accepted but now cannot publish. It was called "The Life of Maginot" . . . The Montezuma Nudist Camp deal to use the Ravenhall bathing park in Coney Island was called off when the officials learned that the Steeplechase Park ferris wheel overlooks the planned nudist site . . . A. J. Liebling, the Paris correspondent for the New Yorker magazine, fled to Lisbon. Harold Ross, editor of the publication, cabled Liebling, advising: "Cable your story immediately, as we go to press on Tuesday." Liebling, with a Clipper ticket in his pocket, replied: "I'll be in your office with it on Monday" . . . Lillian Gish read of France's surrender, and sobbed: "We will soon be looking back to the good old days of October, 1929 and 1930."

JIMMY DURANTE, at the Stork Club, told of his personal appearance tour through England, where the critics were kind to him—so kind that, on the eve of his departure, Durante tendered a huge dinner party for all of them . . . The next week, riding on a train from France to Italy, Durante picked up an Italian paper, and scanned it. He can't read Italian—but noticed that "Durante" appeared in almost every column. He felt that this was due to the advance notices sent by the appreciative British newspaperman, clipped 75 of these columns, and put them into his scrapbook. But then, in the washroom, he saw a sign in which the word "Durante" appeared. He saw that word also in signs on Roman establishments being reconstructed. Only then did he learn that "Durante," in Italian, did not refer to a famed Broadway comic—but that it meant "during."

The Cagneys Win Golden Gloves

Jean was the inspiration for a young athlete who entered the Golden Gloves tourney, then gave his prize to her in her recent film role in "Golden Gloves."

The Soy Bean Plays a Part In New Film

Marooned Steamer Loaded With Beans Solves a Problem

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 26 (U.P.).—The European war played into the hands of the movies today and gave the producers of a comedy, of all things, a real break.

In production was "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" and the Warner Brothers had to have a ship for Annie to tow off the sand bar. Else there'd have been no picture. Only there weren't any ships for movie making purposes.

Every American boat was busy hauling merchandise. Every outmoded steamer in Los Angeles Harbor, which the movies used to rent, had been sold to the belligerents. There simply wasn't a steamer for Tuboat Annie to tug.

It was at this crisis in the life of a motion picture that the harried location manager learned there was a Danish motorship, the Nord Pol, interned in the outer harbor. He didn't know whether international law would allow such a boat to act in the movies, but he gave it a try. Capt. Peter Mortensen nearly kissed him.

Problem Of the Bean

The captain, his wife, and crew of 22 had been marooned by the breakwater for five long weeks. Their pay long since had stopped and they were spending their time chaperoning 5,000 tons of cantankerous Manchukuoan soy beans. If they got too damp and sprouted, they'd spring a plate and sink the ship. If they got too dry, they'd explode.

It was no fun watching beans. It was boresome. Upshot was that the captain rented the Nord Pol to the movies at $100 per day and glad for the chance. The $100 came in handy and movie stars so close you could touch 'em gave the crew something to think about besides beans.

So Tugboat (Marjorie Rambeau) Annie hitched her tug, the Narcissus, to the Nord Pol and towed her from mythical danger for a week, while Peter (Alan Hale) Bullwinkle aboard his Salamander gritted his teeth and tried to muscle into the job.

The movie makers rented two harbor tugs to take the places of the boats made famous by Norman Reilly Raine in his Saturday Evening Post stories, and thereby got in bad with the U. S. Coast Guard. The Warners painted over the names of the two boats and rechristened them Narcissus and Salamander.

So Warners Are "Pirates"

The Coast Guard said this was against the law. It said only pirates did tricks like that. The Warners squared themselves by displaying small signs, invisible to the cameras, with the real names of the tugs.

Tugboat Annie first was portrayed in the movies by the late Marie Dressler. Wallace Beery played opposite her. Miss Dressler was a hard-boiled lady who socked the chief engineer when he deserved it and otherwise made life miserable for her associates.

Miss Rambeau, once known as one of the most beautiful girls on the stage, is a less rambunctious Annie. She has a magnificent pair of unplucked eyebrows, as provided by the makeup department, but otherwise she's a ladylike tugboat captain. She doesn't hit anybody on the nose.

Hale is as tough as Beery ever was, while Chill Wills is the laziest engineer Tugboat Annie ever signed. Lew Seiler is directing and it looks as if it ought to be a funny show. What's worrying us is the S. S. Nord Pol. It's also worrying Capt. Nortensen.

He'd just loaded her with Oriental soy beans and was heading for Denmark via the Panama Canal when the Nazis took over his homeland. That theoretically made the Nord Pol an enemy ship, subject to seizure by the British. The owners ordered the captain to put into a neutral port. He made for Los Angeles.

He wasn't worried about the beans then. He figured he could sell 'em in the United States at a small profit and wait out the war in peace. But he discovered that America grows her own beans and has put such a high tariff on Oriental beans that nobody here can afford to buy 'em at any price.

So the captain is hanging on to his beans, which are becoming more dangerous by the hour. If he subdues them, or even if he doesn't, he ought to make a good movie plot himself.

Bank Movie Has Cast of Bankers

All but one of the principals in Warners' story of a bank, "Money and the Woman," have had previous banking experience.

John Litel served as an assistant manager before joining a stock company. Brenda Marshall worked in a Texas bank as a stenographer during a summer vacation while attending college.

Dialogue director Hugh Cummings, unit manager Bob Ross and actor Bill Marshall were tellers. Bit player Mary Louise Smith's father is manager of a local bank. "Big Boy" Williams once was a bank messenger. Roger Pryor worked in a bank for one day—during Boys' Week when he was in high school.

Director's Dancing

Director Busby Berkeley is getting a strenuous workout daily, all in the interest of Mickey Rooney's higher education. Mickey is called on to tap-dance in "Strike Up the Band," and Berkeley is giving him the lessons. Every day they go into a huddle with Roger Edens, who plays "While Strolling in the Park One Day" for Mickey's terpischorean efforts. Berkeley dances every step Mickey dances.

'The Profile' Names Actors Better Than He

John Barrymore Rattles Off Ten By Their Names

Hollywood, June 26 (AP).—There are, says John Barrymore, at least ten better actors on the screen than he.

Now there's no use of rushing into a situation like this without giving you the build-up, so hold your hats because we're coming to the curves.

John was whooping it up like all get out, chewing scenery until it almost collapsed and he wound up his dizzy assault on the art dramatic with how'm-I-doing glance at his appreciative audience.

There was among this audience on a sound stage late yesterday a handful of young movie players, gathered to see how a Barrymore does it, or, as one cynic put it, "gets away with it." There also was a newspaperman who, as you'll learn in half a jiffy, made a rush suggestion. Said he to the great profile:

"See those youngsters—why don't you charge them a dollar an hour for lessons in acting. Make 'em pay to come in here and watch you and donate the money . . ." (He was going to add "to the Red Cross.")

In Highest Dudgeon

Barrymore might have been struck in the chin. He drew himself to a greater height, so as to look down upon the worm who made such an idiotic suggestion.

"That—that would make me the most conceited ass in Hollywood," he stormed. "Why, there are any number of extremely fine actors worth watching for pointers. Why . . ."

"Name ten," interrupted the worm, turning slightly. And did John do so? He did, fortwith.

He put his brother Lionel first, because "with competition like that in the family I prefer to be gracious rather than argued with."

And the others are Spencer Tracy, George Sanders, Paul Muni, Henry Fonda, Roland Young, C. Aubrey Smith, George Raft, John Carradine, and Maria Ouspenskaya. Maria, said John transcends any sex difference in the art of acting "and is an example for both men and women to follow."

Name for Actor's Baby Awaits Robe

It will be three or four weeks before James Stephenson's new son is called anything but "Baby." The infant's christening awaits the arrival of a ceremonial robe from England.

The actor explained that the robe was the one worn by his wife when she was christened. It is being sent on by her family.

Nazi Successes Send Many New Yorkers To Psychiatrists

New York, June 27.

MAY 10 was as serious a day, on a very minor scale, for New Yorkers as it was for the ill-fated citizens of the Low Countries. That was the day the Heinkels dove on the Netherland defenses, and the steel monsters rumbler ovrumbled overland. Already the town's physicians are noting serious reactions on the milling millions of this always nerve-ridden town, and it may get worse before it gets better.

ALICE HUGHES

The appalling swiftness of the German triumph over the Europe we knew, and the needless slaughter of innocents that ensued, soon sent thousands of citizens here to their family doctors, complaining of loss of appetite, sleeplessness and headaches of unexplained origin.

The brain-pickers of the psychiatric arm are besieged with new customers, for it is obvious that these physical symptoms only signify deep-set mental disturbances. Youngsters of military age fret about what next, and their parents are in a natural dither over the destination of their offspring. In fact, it is safe to say that all ages and all walks of life are now affected here, and why not? It seems to me that those people, whether dumbly or with malice bordering on treason, who underscore the seriousness of our current days, simply can't add 1 and 1 and get 2, or else should be fitted with lip-buttons.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mrs. Hortense Odlum, who is at the head of a big Fifth avenue store and wrote about it a year ago, doesn't take to the sea or the mountains for her holidays. She heads straight for her native Utah and meditates as she rests from the labors.

We're enjoying an interesting visitor in the person of Margaret Dumont, just in from Hollywood. If you don't recall the name, you'll remember her as the classy, dignified and sequin-covered lady who has acted as general punching bag for the zany Marx Brothers in practically all their screen comedies. Years ago she was in society herself, as the wife of Peter Moller, pioneer sugar refiner. Trained for the theater in girlhood, she went back to it after his death, and the Marx work made her famous, and a lot of money, too. But now she's fed up and vows she'll have no more of it. And if you remember what happened to her in "A Night at the Circus," you won't blame Margaret a jot, or even a small tittle.

Of all the attractive women about town at the moment, there's none much cuter than Osa Johnson, the African wanderer. Her figure is trim, she's dressing very smartly, and there isn't a more toothsome little lady in Gotham these days.

Passing St. James Church on Madison avenue the other day, I caught a ride at a very elegant wedding indeed. I lurked about the marquee with the dear old biddies who always frequent the fringes of stylish nuptials, and found that the groom was a clergyman, complete with silk hat, and very good-looking. He was the Rev. James A. Paul, who once worked at St. James, and the bride was a pretty lass named Jean Lithgow, of that parish. We all pronounced it a very fine wedding, what we saw of it, and then went on about our grocery-buying.

Barnyard Glamour Girls

Glamorous, despite their barnyard background, are these little girls caught unaware. They wear clothes designed to stand up under mudpie making, grass rolling, even poultry feeding. The 10-year-old (left) wears a skirt and slacks of faded blue denim which go sailing as easily as landlubbing. The slacks are buttoned sailor-fashion and the blouse zips down the front for quick action. The 5-year-old wears gingham overalls in cheerful red and blue plaid with a cotton knit sweater, the whole outfit costing less than $3

By Ida Jean Kain

ACCORDING to statistics, Miss Average College Girl has a pretty nice figure! She is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and has these specifications: Bust 34 inches, waist 26 inches and hips 37.4 inches. These figures were based on an anthropometric survey conducted at Upsala College by the WPA for the serious purpose of standardizing sizes of womens' ready-to-wear clothes.

But the male undergraduates at Upsala, being interested in figures, if not statistics, checked these measurements against those of a certain Hollywood glamour girl and found that Miss Average College Girl has a better figure! Since the movie star they chose is one-half inch taller than the WPA composite, weighs 7 pounds less and has a smaller bust but larger hips, it must have been a certain gorgeous brunette. There are better figures for comparison in Hollywood, but even so, our composite college girl has lovely measurements and normal weight.

While there is no standard set of measurements for a given height, there is what might be called a standard set of proportionate differences. Miss College Girl has an 8-inch difference between the waistline and the bust measurement, which is lovely, and hips 3¼ inches larger than the bust, which she should slim down ¼ inch, according to model streamline measurements.

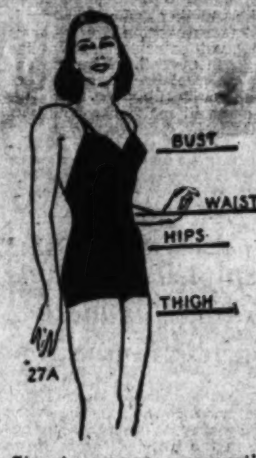
How Does Your Bust Look?

You can check your own proportions and see how you measure up by comparing the waistline with the bust measurement and the bust with the hips. The waistline can be from 7 to 10 inches smaller than the bust circumference—7 is good, 8 very good, 9 and 10 ultrastreamlined! The hips should not be over 2 to 3 inches larger than the bust—and for ultrastreamlines, only 1 inch! If your weight is within 10 per cent of normal for your build and you have these proportionate differences, you have a lovely figure. And if they are out of line, you will know which exercises to concentrate on!

The measurement survey is being carried to the women of the Nation, too, and the Government is making an attempt to determine the exact circumference of the average American woman. We won't have the answers until fall, but by then they expect to have measured some 80,000 women, representing a cross-section of typical feminine population in seven States.

That Settled Look

If the average Mrs. America turns out to have as good proportionate measurements as Miss College Girl it'll surprise me! You probably think indignantly that the college girl should have a better proportioned figure—far better! But there is no reason why women should not have as lovely proportions at 45 as at 25. It isn't age, or raising a family, that puts the figure out of proportion; it is inactivity and lack of the right kind of exercise. As we get older we settle into a routine that practically precludes exercise, particularly those which strengthen the important figure-controlling muscles. Then the muscles get flabby, the waistline and hips take in more territory, and gradually comes the dreaded middle-age spread. But it isn't inevitable! Just 15 to 20 minutes of daily specific exercise can get your figure back in line and keep it beautifully proportioned. And that small amount of regular exercise will keep you supple and improve your health.



Structure governs proportions

Summer Inventory

THERE seems to be more leisure time in summer than in any other season of the year. Why not use this spare time to start a new beauty regime or intensify your old one? In a few weeks you will not only feel better but your appearance may be something to brag about.

For a starter, let the experts in the various beauty fields show you how to do things correctly. Get a good hair stylist to design a becoming coiffure for you and insist that he show you how to train your own hair. If the hair is lifeless and dry, have a good scalp specialist to diagnose the cause. Watch how she massages the scalp and brushes your hair. Ask questions if you like to learn the knack of caring for the hair at home. Then follow her method if your budget doesn't allow for continued expert overhauling. Concentrate on brushing the hair. There's a right and wrong way. Learn the right way.

Figure faults can be corrected through exercises. It's best to get trained assistants to show you how to do your exercises properly. Once you get the hang of the exercises, you can do them at home. There's a salon here that gives 10 reducing treatments at small cost. This treatment consists of 20 minutes of corrective exercising, Swedish massage and cabinet treatments with mild ultra violet rays.

Almond Meal Cleanser

Fay Holden advises cleansing the face weekly with a mealy substance, such as beauty grains, almond meal, etc. She believes this treatment will thoroughly uproot any dirt that might have escaped soap and water or cold cream.

Golden Snowcap an Appetizing Delicacy

THE GENEROUS harvest of summer oranges in California this season, means more abundant health to Mr. and Mrs. Consumer. According to a recent survey by Dr. M. P. Rasmussen, Cornell University, oranges take first place of the five varieties of fruit most in demand. This is because oranges contain valuable food properties and may be used either for juice alone or as a whole fruit.

Orange juice should always be served fresh since flavor is lost when it stands even a short time. Plan to serve chilled juice. Store oranges in refrigerator for several hours or overnight, then extract juice. This avoids flavor loss from ice dilution.

A summer fruit cup topped with an orange sherbert called Golden Snowcap is an appetizing delicacy. To make the fruit cup, combine 2½ cups orange sections, 1 cup watermelon balls and 1 cup fresh pear slices with 1 cup orange juice and ¼ cup lemon juice. The recipe for the sherbet follows:

Golden Snowcap

Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in 2 tablespoons water for 5 minutes. Boil 1½ cups sugar and 1 cup water for 5 minutes to make a sirup. Dissolve gelatin mixture in hot sirup. Beat 2 egg whites until frothy and add 2 tablespoons sugar. Continue beating until stiff. Beat the sirup into the egg whites slowly, then mix in 2 cups orange juice and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour into freezing tray and set cold control for fast freezing. Beat once after sherbet has frozen quite stiff, and return to refrigerator to finish freezing. Yield, about 1 quart.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Father of Four Sons Believes in Spanking, and Does; Mother Deplores It; Asks Appraisal of Its Value

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When space permits, I should be very much interested in having your opinion of the value of corporal punishment in the unbringing of children. My husband has what seems to me to be antiquated ideas concerning the benefits of corporal punishment. He believes in no other form of punishment and whenever he thinks fit, doesn't hesitate to spank our four boys, of whom the eldest is 12. This occurs not infrequently.

I have always looked upon spanking as totally unnecessary, and have never ceased to argue with my husband on the point. When, from time to time, I do prevail, he never fails to accuse me of attempting to spoil the boys, of making mollycoddles of them, and he cites the opinions (which, it seems, concur with his) of one Dr. Garry Meyers, of Cleveland.

My husband admits that spanking has not entirely cured our eldest boy (who has always been something of a problem child) of his occasional fits of obstreperousness; but he maintains that they are undoubtedly less frequent than they would otherwise be. When I tell him that I think a boy of 12 is too old to be spanked under any circumstances, he replies that if youngsters of that age were oftener spanked, there would be less delinquency among adolescents.

One thing in particular I should like you to answer: Do you think my arguing further with my husband on this subject is worthwhile? Thanking you in advance for your views on the debate, I am, very sincerely yours,

CONSTANT READER.

Even Experts Disagree On Merits of Spanking

DEAR C. R.: I happen to have children and the full responsibility for their so-called "home training." They are alternately angelic and trying. When they were quite small (although they are now only 7 and 9) I sometimes (oh, but very rarely) spanked them, and always felt myself to be a momentary parental failure and brute in so doing.

I felt that I was misusing authority, crudely affronting a sensitive human spirit, failing in understanding, taking advantage of another's defenselessness and generally demonstrating personal lack of the mature or civilized insight, foresight, wisdom and resourcefulness that might have prevented the unfortunate denouement; or that would have enabled me to meet the issue, or emergency, in a more constructive way.

I suppose I must say, therefore, that I am consciously (both intellectually and emotionally) opposed to corporal punishment as a parential instrument of child discipline. But being, as most parents are, a person of limitations proportionate to those of the child, I sometimes resorted to said punishment in its mildest form—when the moral of the lesson I sought to convey seemed to require stronger emphasis than words could impart.

Early in my maternal assignment, I had read the statement of one authority that the parent who spanks is demonstrating deficiencies of personality or character which probably give the clue to his child's misbehavior. And this didn't make my conscience any easier. But thinking the thing through, I finally reached what I believe to be the healthy conclusion—anent occasional spankings—that "to err is human," and that since parents are inescapably human and hence imperfect, they may be forgiven for doing the best they can, in their groping way, in training their chips-off-the-old-block to conform to what they believe to be the most acceptable social mold.

And, anyway, along about that time I read the statement of another authority, that a hairbrush applied in righteous anger to the seat of the panties, is, in some instances, a more effective means of instruction (and better received by the child) than an hour's stern or sorrowful sermonizing, of the sire-to-son variety.

Of this I am now fairly sure—the motive which inspires parental chastisement is of vastly more importance (so far as the child's welfare is concerned) than the form it takes. Children sense motives with uncanny clarity, and their reaction is keyed to motive rather than to its expression. Thus, whatever disciplinary punishment is meted out, should be inspired by love of the child, and not by relish of the exercise. And a parent who is constantly spanking, whipping or flourishing the rod comes under deserved suspicion of being, perhaps quite unconsciously, a sadistically inclined autocrat.

As for your husband, if he has been spanking his eldest son, now 12, since infancy, and is still unable for the most part to procure obedience or cooperation except by a display of physical force, I should think he would realize that he has been employing a wrong, or largely ineffective, disciplinary tool. (Discipline, by the way, is not synonymous with punishment. To discipline is to teach; to develop by instruction and exercise; to train in self control and obedience).

Were he a humane, conscientious, sensitively intelligent parent, I should think he would have decided, long since, to use his head rather more, and his hand rather less, in molding, strengthening and perfecting the character and social performance of his child (or children). There is a possibility that there are implications of the bully in his conduct—and his eldest child's obstreperousness, so-called, may be a nervous, instinctively defiant reaction to the father's bully motive.

In brief, the father may be guilty, perhaps unwittingly, of aggravating and perpetuating wrong attitudes in his sons—through trying to cow their spirits, rather than engage in the loftier and more challenging task of directing their turbulent, dynamic energies into creative channels that would put them at peace with themselves and their environment, thus indirectly forging their respective characters to the most unified, acceptable and useful patterns.

Frankly, it is doubtful whether you can win him to a more sympathetic and tentative approach to the awesome task of child rearing. He sounds a little too rigidly self assured to be open to "further argument on the subject." But I suppose it's your duty to keep on trying, so long as you are convinced that his tactics are more harsh than constructive.

Incidentally, I wonder if he has seen any of the Judge Hardy movies, in which Lewis Stone and Mickey Rooney, respectively, play the father and son roles? I haven't, as a matter of fact; but in a recent issue of a well known magazine, I read an amazing testimonial article by a father who avowed that this series had given him remarkably helpful insight into the techniques, possibilities and responsibilities of the male parent's role in dealing with sons. He particularly emphasized Judge Hardy's attitude of respect toward his son; and his man-to-man attitude in guiding, governing and instructing the boy.

Intellectuals may sneer at the notion of receiving sound social and psychological adult education from a medium intended primarily to entertain; but I have long since learned that education is everywhere to be found by him who recognizes the need of it and constantly seeks it in proper humility of spirit.

Chemists Aid Home-Making Arts Today

Glass and Rubber Substitutes Found Housewife's Boon

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE LADY and the chemist! This would be as good a title as any to describe present-day mechanics of housekeeping. For the laboratory is responsible for most innovations in our ways of doing things at home. Whereas the housewife of olden days depended on her own ingenuity for thinking up new ways of using familiar materials, today's home woman has to accustom herself to a whole repertoire of entirely new basic materials, many of them the creations of the chemist.

Plastics of crystal clear quality such as luite and plexiglas, look like glass but don't break easily and are much lighter in weight and not so cold. The uses of these plastics are innumerable. It is used in furniture, salad bowls, flower bowls, shelves, ornaments, handles for cutlery, dresser sets—the full list would be a long one. Artificial glass is also a possibility for use in window panes, stemware and eye glasses. In fact, in all places where breakable glass is a hazard. Tenite is another new glass-like plastic adapted especially for outdoor furniture because the weather won't hurt it.

New Uses Found for Glass

Glass itself, rather than being deposed by the development of a substitute, has been conquering new fields of its own. Glass fabrics are the most spectacular among these developments, for the glass thread has adapted itself to a weave that is not only interesting texturally but which produces a fabric that will not stain, rot, burn or scorch, and which may be kept clean with a damp cloth. Yet it has a beautiful quality and drapes gracefully.

The evolution of a new product, latex, developed from rubber, bids fair to bring on a real revolution in mattresses and upholstery filling. This new material makes a mattress that is light to lift, resilient to sleep on, nonheating, odorless and vermin-proof. Latex is also in use for upholstery, and it is expected that it will eventually entirely replace the webbing-hair-and-spring type of upholstery construction. Already most of the seats on trains and airplanes are of this material, hence their famous comfort.

Another new product that may make a great difference in housekeeping is koroseal, a chemical synthetic that, it is claimed, makes a fabric waterproof, acidproof, stainproof and fire resistant. One of the most spectacular uses to which it has been put so far is to coat ironing board pads. A pad so treated is said to cut down ironing time from 20 to 30 per cent.

Manipulation and Rest May Alleviate That 'Low Back Pain'

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A patient writes: "I have been told that my sciatica is due to a protruded intervertebral disk. Will you please explain what this means?"

The backbone is composed of a series of superimposed separate bones. Between each one is a cartilaginous disk called the intervertebral disk." Recent studies have indicated that in certain cases, low back pain and sciatica may be due to dislocation of this cartilaginous disk. The condition is known as "protruded intercertebral disk."

A considerable difference of opinion has been expressed as to how often it occurs. Probably a very low percentage—not more than 2 per cent of all cases of low back pain. Such cases of sciatica or low back pain as are caused by this condition are always preceded by injury or accident. Reports say that surgical removal of the disk is folowed by relief.

It certainly indicates that whoever made this diagnosis is an alert and up-to-date physician, but it is to be hoped that gossip on this subject wil not spread too rapidly among nervous patients. Most cases of low back pain are relieved by manipulations and by rest, warmth, light treatment and diathermy.

A diabetic or a person who is overweight, who uses saccharin regularly asks whether its continued use is accompanied by any harm.

No. This subject has been carefully investigated by a number of workers, and except in extremely large doses, no harmful effect has ever been proved from its use. The average amount of saccharin used is about a half a grain in a cup of coffee, making 1½ grains a day the average dose. This can be continued for an indefinite period.

There are plenty of diabetic patients who have used saccharin for years and can testify to this fact.

Daughter of Rep. Collins Becomes Bride of Thomas Parker Corwin

St. Alban's Church Scene of Ceremony; Mrs. Raymond Hust and Caroline Clark Are Matron and Maid of Honor

AN OUTSTANDING WEDDING of the end-of-June season took place last evening when Miss Jane Collins, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Ross Alexander Collins, of Mississippi, became the bride of Thomas Parker Corwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Royal E. Corwin, of Washington.

St. Alban's Episcopal Church was the scene of the 8 o'clock ceremony at which the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a Schiaparelli gown of white moussline de soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice, a crushed girdle, short sleeves and a square neckline. A band of dainty eyelet embroidery finished off the neck and sleeves and edged the circular train. A tiara of white daisies, from which fell a fingertip tiered veil, and a bouquet of African daisies were further accents for the bride's ensemble. The "something old" in her costume was the piece of heirloom lace made into the cap that held her tiara. It has been part of mother's bridal veil, and also of her grandmother's.

Mrs. Raymond Hust, a former Sweet Briar classmate of Mrs. Corwin, was matron of honor. Her bouffant frock of delphinum mousseline de soie was fashioned with short puffed sleeves and a square neckline, and she carried yellow painted daisies charmingly arranged in an inverted straw hat hanging over her arm by a velvet streamer.

Bride's Cousin Is Maid of Honor

Miss Caroline Clark, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Her frock of maise mousseline de soie was designed like the one worn by the matron of honor, and her bouquet of blue painted daisies was carried in the same fashion.

There were four bridesmaids. Miss Barbara Cross and Miss Frances Bowie were gowned in pale yellow mousseline de soie, and Mrs. Robert Thomas and Miss Ellen Lee Snodgrass had chosen frocks of sky blue mousseline de soie. Each carried a bouquet of daisies in a hat-shaped basket.

The bridegroom's father was best man, and the ushers included Melville Collins, brother of the bride; Raymond Hust, James E. Welch, James Lee, Lieut. Thad Dulin and Walter Talks.

Reception Follows At Bride's Home

Following the ceremony there was a large reception at the bride's home, 2714 Thirty-sixth street. Standing with the wedding party to receive, the bride's mother was gowned in dusty rose lace and net, with orchid accessories and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Corwin, mother of the bridegroom, wore a frock of moss-green chiffon with brown and yellow accessories and a yellow orchid corsage.

Among those assisting at the reception were Mrs. Pat Harrison, wife of the Senator from Mississippi; wives of the Mississippi delegation in the House, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward and Mrs. J. D. Howerton, of Meridian, Miss.

Sailing Today For Panama

Shortly after the reception, Mr. Corwin and his bride left for New York and will sail from there today for Panama. Traveling, Mrs. Corwin wore a blue and white print frock, fashioned with a redingote and set off with wine accessories. She and her husband will make their home in Washington. They are expected to return here late next month.

The former Miss Collins was graduated from Sweet Briar College in 1937 and received her degree from George Washington Law School this year. She is a member of Phi Delta Legal Fraternity.

Mr. Corwin was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1935 and is now a student at Georgetown University Law School. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Sigma Phi Sigma fraternities.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

WHEN THE WASHINGTON thermometer goes up, so does Mrs. Richard G. Casey. The wife of the Australian Minister has one sure way of keeping cool in a sweltering Washington summer. The other day, when the season's record for heat was broken, she got out her plane and spent the afternoon 4,000 feet up in the clouds. By the time she came down, she was shivering.

Since getting her new Fairchild, Mrs. Casey has gone for many spins between here and New York. The other day she made her first landing in a seaplane.

AS AN AMERICAN LAW forbids aliens o own planes, Mrs. Casey's is registered in Australia. Aircraft there is registered by letters; ours by numbers. When the diplomat's wife radios to a field, "This is ADF, may I land?" the operator, accustomed to numbers, wires back, "Who's the pilot?". When she answers "Mrs. Casey," they message back "Come on in, bright 'eyes." For most airport officials around here have read or heard of the Casey airmindedness.

On a recent trip to New York, the attractive Australian did something which all Americans yearn to do—toured the city by night in a police scouting car. She visited the scene of several five-minute-old Harlem crimes and saw a line-up at headquarters before dawn broke.

DURING THE SIX weeks before she left Australia, Mrs. Casey bought and did over an old house in the suburbs of Melbourne. On top there is a high tower, with a walk, where 80 years ago a patrol was maintained to watch out for bushrangers. These men, like our Western bandits, came galloping into town to rob banks and stores. The Australian Jesse James was one Ned Kelly, who wore a huge iron contraption on his head, with slits for eyes, nose and mouth, and an iron breast plate. But all this hardware did not save him from eventually getting killed.

• • • •

THE MINISTER and Mrs. Casey expect to stay in Washington all summer, along with practically the entire diplomatic corps. They will probably send their two young children to a beach.

• • • •

THE EDGAR PROCHNIKS, who were expecting their daughter, Mrs. Francis Spalding, to sail from Egypt on the Excalibur, have received word that she will not be aboard. This message was sent by the State Department, as there seems to be a law now in Egypt against the sending of private cables.

Mrs. Spalding's husband is an American Foreign Service official stationed in Cairo. With her four children, she planned several weeks ago to return to Washington, but the Prochniks are now in the dark about her schedule.

FURTHER NOTES on the fascinating show at Philadelphia:

The crowd as a whole at the convention is not particularly well dressed. Only about one woman in every ten can lay claim to chic. Chill winds are blowing in Philly this week, so dark clothes, fur scarves and capes are much in evidence.

There was a slight Hollywood touch to the tea given for Mrs. Taft. An organ played throughout, and on a platform was a huge canvas elephant with flapping ears, blinking eyes, and twitching trunk. He carried a red velvet blanket with "Taft" in gold letters.

Joneses in N. Y. On Nuptial Trip

Their wedding took place at 5 p. m. Saturday at the Mount Rainier Christian Church. The Rev. Fred Lothar Miller officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin, which was made with a shower of tulle over the skirt. Her finger-tip veil was held in place with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses, lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Miss Mary K. Bates, a Delta Gamma Chi sister of the bride, was maid of honor and her only attendant. She wore pink mousseline de soie, made with inserts of lace on the net underskirt and short puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was of pink roses and blue delphinium and her shoulder-length veil was pink tulle and was held in place with a coronet of the same blossoms.

Ralph Cole was best man. Ushers were Fred M. Jones, brother of the bridegroom, and Ronald H. Kaufman. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Kaufman, who received the guests, was gowned in blue chiffon and her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Jones, mother of the bridegroom, wore a white frock with a corsage of Talisman roses.

Shortly after the reception the couple left on their wedding trip. The bride's going-away costume was a white frock, cut on tailored lines and worn with a striped jacket and white accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of orchids.

Gala Dance Opens O. E. S. Fete to Raise Temple Funds

Many Notables of the Order Attend; Booths With Great Variety of Exhibits Add Color to Gaily Decorated Clubhouse

Hundreds of members of the Order of the Eastern Star and their friends last night gathered at the clubhouse, 2800 Sixteenth street for the opening of the four-day fete sponsored by the General Temple Auxiliary Board. The proceeds will go to the fund for the new Eastern Star temple to be built on the site behind the clubhouse, which is the old Marshall Field Mansion.

The garden where the roses and the other summer flowers are at the height of bloom was lighted with 3,600 colored bulbs. Recorded music was played during the evening for dancing which started following a formal program. There were also 15 gaily decorated booths contributing to the carnival setting. Turkey Decides Not to Enter War, Continues Defense Preparations

Position Is Guarantee Of Peace, Premier Tells Parliament

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Turkey, June 26.—Premier Refik Saydan of Turkey told Parliament tonight his government has definitely decided not to enter the war.

Turkey, which once considered herself a non-belligerent ally of Great Britain and France, however, is "alertly continuing defense preparations," the premier said.

The address, which was the first official announcement of Turkish policy since Italy entered the conflict came amid grave concern over the future of French-protected Syria and the possibility of a Bulgarian attack on Turkey from the north.

(An agreement between Turkey and Iraq for joint defense of Iraq and Syria, in collaboration with Great Britain, was reported by the British news agency Exchange Telegraph to have been concluded today at Ankara.)

"Our position, devoid of any provocation, is a guarantee of our own and our neighbors' peace," the premier said.

He sought to justify Turkey's refusal to go to war on the side of the Allies when Italy entered the conflict by citing the section of the mutual assistance pact with Britain and France which stipulated that Turkey was required to take no action which would bring her into conflict with Soviet Russia.

Thus, Saydam indicated that Moscow had told Turkey that Russia would regard Turkish entry into the war as a hostile act.

Foreign diplomats, however, believe that the French collapse was the real reason for Turkey's refusal to go to war.

Russia Extends Work Week To Rush Arms

Workers Who Quit Jobs Without Permission Will Wind Up in Jail

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 26.—Russia told her workers today they will have to work longer hours per day and more days per week and that they will wind up in prison if they quit their jobs without permission.

Reason: "We need more metal, coal, oil; more airplanes, tanks, guns."

The new era was announced in a message to workers by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, which explained that war-inspired production speedups in capitalist countries have made it necessary to junk the five-day, 35-hour week and step up to the six-day, 48-hour shift.

Even with this drastic increase, the message insisted, the Soviet working day still will be the shortest in the world, for in other countries "the thumbscrew of capitalist exploitation has been tightened to the limit, and workers labor 10, 12 and more hours daily, all Sundays and holidays abolished."

Through such "universal militarization of their economy," the message continues, the "imperialist states have tremendously increased their production of all armaments."

Hence drastic measures are necessary to step up Soviet arms production, too, for the frenzy of war production in the capitalist world has increased the danger of war for Russia.

The message announces the lengthening of the normal work-change from the "six-day to the seven-day week"—that is, from a week consisting of five working days and one day of rest to a week consisting of six working days and one rest-day.

FBI Arrests Youth As German Agent

Hoehne entered a denial and said he could arrange for his $25,000 bail "through the German consul."

Prison Guards Teach Religion At Elmira

Chaplain Attending Institute Here Relates Success of Experiment

A successful penal experiment of having guards conduct courses in religious education was pictured here yesterday by the Rev. Francis J. Lane, chaplain of Elmira (N. Y.) State Reformatory.

He and chaplains from Sing Sing, Alcatraz, Dannemora, Leavenworth and other penal institutions are attending the Institute for Catholic Prison Chaplains, sponsored by the Federal Bureau of Prisons, the Department of Justice, the National Conference of Catholic Charities and the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Father Lane, for 18 years Elmira chaplain, said in an interview that three years ago he conceived the then pioneer experiment of permitting guards to lead religious education classes. Little was being done for inmates' spiritual and moral welfare at that time, he said.

Six Daily Classes Now

He selected a guard with religious and educational background to initiate the movement, which now embraces six daily classes of 30 students each, meeting for 45-minute periods 18 hours weekly.

Father Lane, who wrote "Twelve Years in a Reformatory," also initiated the idea of having a chaplain visit homes of released prisoners and their families in larger New York State cities for consultation.

The religious education program at Elmira has proved its value in rehabilitiated lives, the priest said.

Father Lane Heads Committee

Father Lane is chairman of the committee on religious worship and services, whose report was discussed at the sessions at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest. The Right Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, presided.

The chaplains went on record as favoring separate chapels and adequate worship equipment for Catholic services in penal institutions. They also urged expansion of religious education programs, missions and Catholic library facilities in prisons.

Among the noted chaplains at the conference are the Rev. Bernard M. Martin, of Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y.; the Rev. Francis McCreech, of Rockview Penitentiary, Bellefonte, Pa.; the Rev. Ambrose R. Hyland, of Clinton Prison, Dannemora, N. Y.; the Rev. George Towle, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the Rev. Joseph M. Clark, S. J., Alcatraz Island, San Francisco.

Raid on British Imminent, Says Italian Press

Duce's Forces Expected To Aid Germans In Attack on Isles

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 26.—With the French armistice signed Italy, like Germany, turned her thoughts and activities today toward the great task of attacking the British Empire. The newspapers say this attack is imminent and that Italian forces will take part not only in the Mediterranean and Africa, but against the British Isles.

The forces at Italy's disposal will depend partly on British success in arousing the French empire to fight on. Authoritative sources here, for instance, deny that the Resident-General of Tunis has pledged his support to Britain, and on the contrary it is claimed that he promised to stand by the Bordeaux government.

In general, the immediate policy is apparently to consider the Bordeaux government as fully empowered to speak for the whole empire. Italians believe it will be hard to rally the outlying colonies when their heart and brain in the mother country have gone dead.

The Italians consider that they have been generous in their armistice terms but it is pointed out that this was a military convention, not a peace treaty with political implications. Not having fought against the French or won a military victory like the Germans, the Italians admit that it would have been bad grace on their part to have exacted a high price.

Twenty Die in Air Raid

Rome, June 26 (AP) (By Radio).—Twenty civilians were killed in a British air raid on Trapani, on the west coast of Sicily, the Rome radio announced today.

The civilians killed were listed as 12 men above 60 years of age, 4 women and 4 children below 15. Seventeen were injured.

The Italian high command announced today that British bombing planes had attempted to raid Naples, but had been driven off.

The British also raided Asmara and Diredawa in East Africa, "without success," and lost two planes, the high command declared. Elsewhere quiet was reported.

Economic Security Defense Against Nazis, Says Rigby

Col. William C. Rigby, general counsel for Puerto Rico, told the Federal Bar Association yesterday that the lawyers of the Western Hemisphere must unite to preserve liberty, promote economic security and stimulate inter-American trade by producing uniform commercial legislation. He spoke at a luncheon in the Army and Navy Club.

Col. Rigby, former assistant judge advocate general of the United States Army, stated that the preservation of liberty of speech, individual action and individual enterprise are not sufficient to counteract the Nazi and Fascist threat.

"It is our job," he said, "to work out and secure the liberty of economic security. That is the deep basis of the appeal of Nazi and Fascist forms of government—an appeal which is making intellectual headway throughout the world. Democracy is truly on trial."

American Students To Help Mexicans Construct School

Daniel Pollitt, of 4310 Cathedral avenue northwest, and 24 other college students were due in Torren, Mexico, yesterday to help Mexican peasants build a school house in the Laguna area, where the Mexican government has a land rehabilitation project.

The United States students were sent there by the American Friends Service Committee in a goodwill project. They will spend eight weeks there, studying economic, social and international problems of Mexico in the evenings.

Pollitt, a student at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hubbard Pollitt, of Washington.

Rumanian and Soviet Planes Clash at Bessarabia Border

Bucharest Halts Civil Airlines to Province; German-Italian Pact to Divide Balkans Reported; Independent Ukraine Predicted

Bucharest (Thursday), June 27 (AP).—The Rumanian airlines suspended all commercial service from the capital to Cernauti, Jassy, Cetatia-Alba and other Bessarabian cities today following a report of a border clash between a Rumanian and a Russian plane.

Reports from Cernauti said four Russian machines were fired on near there. One was shot down and others were said to have dropped bombs in a nearby village.

Meanwhile, the new Soviet Minister Lavrentieff had not been received officially, although he had asked for an immediate audience.

[The New York Times said Germany and Italy are reported to have reached an agreement whereby Slovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania will be placed under German influence and Yugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria under Italian influence, according to Rumanian political personalities arriving today from Berlin where they met prominent German officials. All territorial claims of the Balkan countries will be settled and the decision enacted immediately.

[German circles intend to establish peace in the east as well as south of Europe for at least 50 years, it was stated. The same circles state also that Germany intends to establish an independent Ukrania.]

The reported clash between Russian and Rumanian planes followed a report in Bucharest last Monday that 100 Russian planes scouted the Bessarabian province and that several clashes between groups of soldiers had taken place across the Dniester River, dividing line between Rumania and Soviet Russia.

Rumanian officials refused to confirm or deny the reports of the land skirmishes.

(Russian officials also have refused to confirm or deny them.)

Once Russian Province

Bessarabia, Rumania's eastern province, formerly was ruled by Russia, but broke off and joined Rumania in 1917.

That something may have gone wrong with King Carol's formation of a new totalitarian party to swing Rumania more into line with the Axis powers was seen in the announcement by Jon Mikhailache, close friend of Julio Maniu, the leader of the National Peasants Party, that he was quitting his new post of royal councilor and retiring to private life. There was no public explanation of his decision, however.

U. S. Voted Right to Use School Shops

Board to Make Buildings Available For Training of Defense Workers

The Board of Education yesterday joined in the national defense program by authorizing use of shops in its vocational schools for training workers, in the nation-wide plan being set up by the United States office of education with the recent $15,000,000 appropriation by Congress.

Since summer use of the facilities is expected, the board empowered its president and the acting superintendent of schools to act on details, while the board is in recess. Additional use of the shops in the fall, at hours when they are not used by regular pupils, also was indicated.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, reported the 1,402-person capacity of vocational school facilities could be increased by perhaps 25 per cent if additional funds were available to increase equipment.

In addition, approximately 30 wood shops of junior and senior high schools, with a capacity of 600, could be used, if equipment were increased.

Could Use Metal Shops

Twenty-four art metal shops with a capacity of approximately 500 could be converted, at no great cost, into tin or sheet metal shops, it was pointed out.

Eight schools would take care of the basic capacity of 1,402. They are Abbot, Chamberlain and Dennison Vocational Schools, Central High School, McKinley High School, Phelps and Washington Vocational Schools and Armstrong High School.

According to the plan being worked out by the Office of Education with school authorities in the various States, two groups of workers, in addition to regular pupils, would be trained in occupations vital to national defense. Unemployed adults and also employed persons would take courses.

Vocational schools here are equipped for classes for machinists and electricians, for courses in radio service, auto mechanics, welding, steamfitting, drafting and numerous other related courses. A course in aircraft mechanics is being given in Armstrong High School.

Red Cross May Get Use

The board yesterday indicated that use of some buildings by the Red Cross also is contemplated this summer.

The board set up a proposed staggered schedule for the $7,889,900 school building replacement program, between now and 1948. The report was referred to its finance committee for consideration in the preparation of the 1942 budget.

The program covers 14 replacement projects, outlined previously by a committee appointed by the District Commissioners at the request of the Senate and House Appropriations Committee.

With sites and plans provided in previous years, funds for the building would be forthcoming in the following years, according to this schedule:

Total amounts involved each year would be: 1941, $211,000; 1942, $1,195,200; 1943, $1,134,850; 1944, $1,144,500; 1945, $1,185,500; 1946, $1,098,350; 1947, $1,070,500; 1948, $850,000.

N. A. Danoswky, statistician of the District public schools, was appointed assistant principal of Eastern High School yesterday to succeed Thomas J. Holmes, who recently became principal of the new Calvin Coolidge High School.

Teacher Promoted

Herbert K. Bosley, teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School, was promoted to its assistant principalship yesterday.

The board also made permanent the promotion of T. F. Ferry, principal at Paul Junior High School.

Through the schools, a total of $9,043.60 has been given to the Red Cross War Relief Fund, Dr. Ballou reported.

Occupational classes for children who are "over-age for their educational progress" will be established in junior high schools of Divisions 1-9 next session, according to plans discussed at the meeting. A total of 147 pupils was recommended to these classes from elementary schools where such courses have already been developed.

Shops in junior high schools will be opened for hobby work this summer, according to plans presented by Lewis Barrett, coordinator of recreation, at the meeting yesterday.

Arkansas Avenue Group Offers Aid In Defense Plans

The Arkansas Avenue Community Association last night offered its services to the District Commissioners in the carrying out of any national or civic defense plans.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the president to appoint a committee to confer with the commissioners on the matter.

The association attacked recent decisions of the Zoning Commission and urged Congress to amend the law to prevent changes in first residential zones without the concurrence of two-thirds of the taxpayers in the immediate neighborhood.

Another resolution asked the Commissioners to exercise greater care before approving the removal of shade trees from residential streets, especially when replanting of smaller trees is not intended.

The association met at Telford's Buffeteria, 4728 Fourteenth street

'Ain't Like the Good Old Days'

Ten-Cents-a-Parcel Plan Cuts Earnings of Redcaps

1. JUST A DIME—Dora L. Preston, a Washington commuter, takes advantage of the Union Station rule allowing several small items—like this fitted case, umbrella and coat—to be tied into one parcel, so that the redcap's charge is only 10 cents, not 30

There's a lot more to this business of redcapping at Union Station than meets the eye when a bagtoter walks by, a little investigating revealed yesterday.

Social significance, capital vs. labor, divided opinions—they come into the picture, definitely, though a redcap's life would seem to be free of such thought-provoking impedimenta.

Take the income, for example. In April the men who carry your baggage were placed under a new compensation system. Previously having subsisted on tips alone, drawing no wages, they went on a 30-cents-an-hour basis. The working day was fixed at eight hours. A rate of 10 cents for each bag, or other parcel carried, was set, such revenue going to the terminal company.

An official was asked yesterday how the new plan is working, now that it has had 10 weeks' trial.

"Fine, as far as the public is concerned," he replied. "We can tell that by the number of compliments received since the change was made. However, about 30 per cent of the redcaps are dissatisfied with the new setup. Say they don't make as much money as before.

"There's no denying that they're making less. In wages they are drawing $2.40 a day and averaging $2 to $3 a day in tips. They are permitted to accept tips but must not solicit them. Under the old system they earned as much as $7 or $8 a day."

On the other hand, he pointed out, they have an assured, minimum income today. They are wage earners, grateful for but not wholly dependent upon tips.

But those words were no comfort to one redcap halted in the concourse between jobs.

"We're in a fix," he said. "Why, you know I've made just 20 cents in tips since 3:30 (it was then 4:30 p. m.). Two forty a day, and little tips like that, ain't enough to support my family."

Learning, via the grapevine, that the press was prowling through the terminal, many of the red caps gathered 'round and willingly aired their woes, though they waited until questions were asked.

"Wish we'd get some action soon on our demand for 39 cents an hour," one said.

"It ain't like the old days," another sighed.

"Ah'm sayin' nothin'," announced one of the more cautious porters, asked what he thought.

One factor in their dwindling income, it seems is the increase in time given customers. Previously a patron dismissed a red cap as quickly as possible because the longer he held him the larger the tips he felt obliged to give. All that's changed now.

2. THIS TIME'S ON THE STATION—A traveler may hold a redcap an hour or more and still pay only 10 cents per bag, though the porter's time costs the terminal 30 cents an hour. Redcap Vernon Ellis sets down the suitcase of a customer receiving a haircut from Sam Perticone

The terminal official explained that the redcaps are instructed to lean over backward in satisfying the client. For example, a person wishing to make a 2 o'clock train may arrive at the station at 1, engage a porter for his bag and hold him until traintime—all for 10 cents per parcel. During that hour the traveler may dine, get shaved, read a book or do what he pleases, meantime retaining the redcap.

There are instructions, also, to make one parcel out of two or more small ones, so that the customer is charged only 10 cents. A woman getting off a train with an umbrella, lightweight coat and small case may have all three wrapped together and pay the redcap a dime, not 30 cents.

Opinion is divided among the redcaps on the new system, introduced only this week, of paying for their parcel tickets in advance instead of settling up at the end of each day's work. Formerly they turned in their stubs and unused tickets daily, paying over a dime for each stub returned by the customer. Now they buy 100 tickets for $10 and keep receipts from patrons. When the supply is exhausted, they buy $10 worth more.

"Ah declare, this business is getting mos' too complicated for me," said one veteran redcap.

Indications Point To Confirmation Of Juvenile Court Judge

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Hearings on the reappointment of Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley were closed yesterday by a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee with all indications pointing to her confirmation.

A final meeting will be held this morning, however, to give counsel for Miss Bentley an opportunity to offer rebuttal testimony.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who has conducted four sessions of the inquiry, stated at the close of yesterday's hearing that he will hear no further complaints against the juvenile court judge unless unusual circumstances arise. Before closing the case, he issued a blanket invitation to anyone with a grievance to testify.

The court was sharply criticized by Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, dismissed superintendent of the National Training School for Girls; Mrs. Alice Sheldon, director of school attendance, and Mrs. Augusta Spaulding, former juvenile court clerk. The latter two testified under subpoena, they said.

Dr. Smith directed her attack chiefly at the system of the court and expressed the opinion that Judge Bentley "has many fine qualities" and might develop into a capable judge under a different arrangement. Yet she criticized Miss Bentley for the speed with which she disposes of cases.

Juveniles at the National Training School for Girls, Dr. Smith said, told her they had no chance at all to present their cases. Explaining that she had visited many of the principal juvenile courts of the United States, she commented: "I have never seen a court which ticked off the cases like this one does."

This statement brought applause from a handful of the spectators, and Senator McCarran called for order, explaining that he wanted neither signs of approval or disapproval.

Dr. Smith said that she had never been permitted to visit the local Juvenile Court, although she had made repeated requests for permission and other visitors are invited frequently.

McCarran "Impressed"

Senator McCarran, while explaining that he was making no advance decisions, stated that he was "greatly impressed" by Dr. Smith's testimony and that he was inclined to believe "the whole matter may involve the social system here."

His remark came after Dr. Smith had said that "Judge Bentley reflects the thoroughly demoralizing practices that are in effect in the District." The juvenile penal institutions, she said, are "a disgrace to the Nation," which even Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been unable to improve.

Mrs. Sheldon charged that Judge Bentley is "not concerned with the welfare of children" while reciting instances in which parents had been incarcerated or placed under bond in cases of failure to obey the truancy law.

Speaking caustically of the court's actions, Mrs. Sheldon spoke of one truancy case thus:

"Judge Bentley took more time to discuss this case than ever before—almost five minutes. That was because there were women spectators in the courtroom."

Tells of Penn-Fenning Case

Reciting her recollection of the Penn-Fenning case, Mrs. Spaulding told the commmittee that two youths about 15 years of age were committed to the National Training School for Boys until they were 21, after a hearing which lasted about three minutes and in which no testimony was taken. The boys had pleaded guilty.

The boys later were put on probation after counsel had interceded and had the case reopened for a new trial before Judge Mary O'Toole.

Mrs. Spaulding said that parents accompanying children to court were usually not permitted to testify in defense of their children, and that in the majority of cases juveniles were not represented by counsel.

George A. Parker, former president of the Washington Bar Association, told the committee of a nonsupport case in which Judge Bentley announced her verdict of guilty before he had been allowed an opportunity to present the defense.

Parker said he called attention to the apparent mental disorder of the plaintiff, moreover, but that the court took no cognizance of it. Within a month, he said, the plaintiff had been committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The hearing ended with a charge by Mrs. Leslie C. Wright, Northwest civic leader, that the District Bar Association committee had "whitewashed" Judge Bentley.

Morris Heads Police Rookies

William V. Morris, Hyattsville, son of a former policeman, is the president of the recently graduated rookie school of the Metropolitan Police. His father was the late Robert Morris, former acting sergeant, who was retired because of disabilities received in line of duty, and who later served as house officer of the Willard Hotel.

Morris attended Bullis Preparatory School and the University of Maryland, playing football at both institutions. He was also a member of the boxing squad and track team at the latter.

Work Versus Glamour

A young star of the Metropolitan Opera, a monologist, and a harpist—all members of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority—last night occupied the spotlight at the head table at the final banquet of the organization's convention at Wardman Park Hotel.

Pausing in the lobby before taking her place as guest of honor, Miss Jean Dickenson said a singer's carer is one in which "just plain work" overbalances the glamour.

Singing from her childhood up in all available groups in her native Denver was the means to successful competition in New York, she said.

Mrs. Alice Ringling Coerper, of the Ringling Circus family, showed a reporter an empty picture frame, explaining "this is my husband."

When asked the whereabouts of her husband, Mrs. Coerper declared, 'I am in love with three men and they're all draft age." She referred, she said, to her three sons.

Miss Grace Weymer, harpist, overheard the conversation and furnished the press with the correct pronunciation for the word, monologist. Monology is Mrs. Coerper's avocation.

When asked for comment on her career, Miss Weymer produced a circular desecribing her past achievements, with comments from music critics on newspapers ranging from the Syracuse Herald to the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald Times.

"Now is that enough for an interview?" she asked.

Crash Causes Visitor To Miss Banquet

Miss Betty Snyder, of Wittenberg College, came all the way from Van Wert, Ohio, to attend last night's Gamma Phi Beta banquet, but en route to Wardman Park Hotel her cab collided with an auto at Fourteenth and Fairmont streets northwest.

She was treated for head and shoulder injuries at Garfield Hospital, and although everyone concerned made haste, she arrived at the hotel too late to attend the dinner.

Kindler Adds 3 Musicians To Orchestra

Flutist, Trombonist, Bassoonist to Play in Water Gate Concert

Three major changes in the personnel of the National Symphony Orchestra were announced last night by Conductor Hans Kindler, following his return from New York and Philadelphia, where he had been holding auditions.

The new players will make their first appearance with the orchestra at the opening of the sunset concerts at the Water Gate, July 7. They are Britton Johnson, of Philadelphia, graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, who will become first flutist; Robert Marsteller, a former member of the Rochester Symphony Orchestra, who will be first trombonist, and Walter Maciejewicz, another Curtis graduate, who will be second bassoonist.

The newcomers replace Albert N. Tipton and William M. Gibson, who have joined the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Franklin Biskey, who accepted a post with Leopold Stokowski's All-American Youth Orchestra.

Dr. Kindler expressed himself as being exceedingly pleased with his new players, and was especially strong in praise for Marsteller, whom he heard for the first time two years ago. He added that it was a compliment to the National Symphony that it had developed musicians of such caliber that organizations like the Philadelphia Orchestra bid for their services.

Season tickets for the eight-week series of Water Gate concerts are on sale at the Homer L Kitt Music Store, 1330 G street northwest. Tickets for the opening concert go on sale Monday.

Bandit Gets $45 At Liquor Store; Believed Wounded

A bandit in a white suit and collegiate hat got $45 in a holdup last night in the liquor store at 311 H street northwest. There also was a possibility that he also got a bullet Charles Weinstein 40, fired at the gunman as he left.

According to Weinstein's wife, Rebecca, the two of them together with the colored messenger, James Key, of 504 Rhode Island avenue northwest, were closing the store when two bandits entered.

They took $45 from Weinstein and left. The store owner, who had been robbed four times in the last four years, grabbed up his own pistol and shot once from close range at the bandit leader, dressed in white.

Capital News in Brief

Little Blaze—Much Ado

Grease-lined ventilator flues from the Mayflower Coffee Shop's kitchen caught fire last night, bringing two fire trucks, six engines and much confusion to the hotel's rear court.

Most patrons of the hotel went about their business in ignorance of the excitement caused by heat that was intended for a pan of lobster Newburg but which set fire to the flue above the stove and sent flames high into the sky from the one-story annex.

The damage, said a Mayflower official, amounted mostly to lobster Newburg. One of the fire engines was damaged slightly en route to the fire when it collided with a street car at Fourteenth and L streets northwest. Nobody was hurt.

Safe With $500 Stolen

Detectives last night were in a safe containing about $50 in currency and $600 in checks from Edmonds Optical Co., 915 Fifteenth street northwest.

The loss was discovered about 7 a. m. yesterday by Joseph R. Harrison, manager, who told Detective Lieut. John H. Fowler the office had not been ransacked.

Fowler said the robbers must have used keys to enter. The safe, weighing 200 pounds, was said to be about 18 by 24 inches.

Federal Show Tonight

A program of songs, dances and a radio show and motion picture will be presented in the Agriculture Department auditorium at 8 tonight by the Federal Playhouse. The film, "Bill Howard R. F. D.," deals with rural electrification, and the radio show concerns a Federal employe and his family.

Marye Frances Durst will sing, Richard M. Towers will do an acrobatic dance and Emmy Anderson, director of the Playhouse Health Club, will give an exhibition of her health and counter-weight exercises.

Whale of a Crash

It was neither torpedo nor floating mine that put the Coast Guard cutter Campbell out of action yesterday—it was merely a dead whale, headquarters announced here.

The cutter, on neutrality patrol around Greenland, damaged its propeller so badly after running into the sea mammal that it had to head back to Boston for repairs.

Californians Dance

Californians turned out by the hundreds last night at Glen Echo and danced to the music of a favorite son—Paul Kain—and his orchestra.

It was California night at the amusement park, and the orchestra played all the State songs and college tunes.

Six Injured In Five D. C. Accidents

Three Children Hurt in Mishaps Involving Bicycles

Six persons were injured, several severely, in five Washington traffic accidents yesterday.

Miss Claudine Wannamaker, 31, of 250 Farragut street northwest, and Miss Elma Edson, 56, of 3922 Thirteenth street northwest, clerks at the War College, were hurt when their car collided with an automobile driven by James Worthy, colored, 31, of Riverdale, Md., at Sixth and C streets northwest.

At Emergency Hospital Miss Wannamaker was treated for head and arm lacerations, and Miss Edson for a possible collarbone fracture. Worthy was charged with having a defective handbrake on his car.

Thomas Harlow, 69, of 1230 Rhode Island avenue northeast, suffered a head injury when struck by an automobile as he stepped from a street car at Thirteenth and Rhode Island avenue northeast. He was taken to Sibley Hospital.

Ten-year-old Pearl Wyncoop, of 1040 North Hudson street, Arlington, suffered severe lacerations of the thigh and skull and a possible skull fracture when her bicycle was struck by an automobile near her home. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

In another bicycle accident Robert Brewer, 15, of 4520 Fourth street northwest suffered a possible arm fracture when struck by an automobile as he entered Buchanan street northwest from an alley near Fourth street. Charles Hall, 5, of 1417 Columbia street northwest, was taken to Children's Hospital with a broken leg after he was struck by a bicycle near his home.

Police Accused Of 'Brutality'

The Commissioners yesterday asked Maj. Ernest W. Brown for a "complete report" on recent complaints of alleged police brutality in the Georgetown section.

Protests of reported brutality to colored prisoners in the Seventh Precinct were made to the Commissioners by the Communist Party here.

Sergt. Deus 'Indefinitely' Suspended

Action Is Taken After Many Protest In His Accidental Shooting of Boy

Sergt. Vernon O. Deus was suspended "indefinitely" from the Capitol Police force at 3 p. m. yesterday for "negligence" in the accidental shooting of 10-year-old Fred Walker, jr., 912 Fifth street northwest, in the Senate Office Building guard room Monday.

Decision to suspend the officer who was removed from duty immediately, was taken, according to Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms and chairman of the Capitol Police Board, on the basis of an investigation of the shooting by Lieut. Roy W. Brown, board clerk.

Brown said he had been advised by Romney that Sergt. Deus, who is married and the father of a small child, had also been given a reprimand. Brown added he informed Capitol Police Capt. William S. Orthman at 3:30 p. m. of the action taken.

His investigation, Lieut. Brown said, showed that the shooting was "purely accidental."

Organizations Protest

Deus' suspension followed by four hours' demands of representatives of colored organizations here for dismissal and prosecution of the policeman. The demands were made in a conference with Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms and a member of the police board.

The delegation then called at the office of United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran, where they reported to Curran's assistant, John W. Fihelly, statements made by two children, Margaret Marie, 11, and her brother, Elijah, 12, of 440 I street northwest, who were present at the shooting.

Boy's Condition Good

Attending the conferences with Jurney and Fihelly were the Rev. Arthur D. Gray, Washington Council of the National Negro Congress; the Rev. R. W. Brooks, Ministerial Alliance; Mrs. Gertrude B. Stone and John Lovell, of the National Association for the Advancement of Coolred People; John P. Davis, executive secretary of the congress; Leon Ransom, Federation of Civic Associations; William A. Hastie, Howard University; Miss Bertha Blair and Hugh Miller, Washington committee for democratic action.

The Walker boy's condition was described in Casualty Hospital last night as being "very good." He was wounded in the neck.

Walker Steals Second as Sox Infield Neglects to Cover Bag

Travis' Fluke In 9th Leads To Disaster

Taft Wright's Hit Brings in Winning Run After Chicago Nullifies Advantage

By Shirley Povich.

Chicago, June 26.—The box score states that the Nats played errorless ball today, but don't you believe it. They made a miserable mess of a one-run lead in the ninth inning and invited the White Sox to win the ball game, which they did, 7 to 6.

Cecil Travis was no drawback to the White Sox in that last inning which the Nats entered with a 6-5 lead. Third Baseman Travis accomplished several things, but playing third base was not one of 'em.

Joe Haynes had pitched five consecutive scoreless innings after relieving Walter Masterson when he invited his own doom by pitching a single to Mike Tresh to start off the ninth. Then Travis virtually scuttled the Nats. He raced almost all the way to the plate for Bill Dietrich's bunt and attempted to wrest it away from Catcher Rick Ferrell with the result that Dietrich's attempted sacrifice went for a hit.

Tresh Keeps on Going

But that wasn't all. Tresh, noting that Travis was making no move to get back to third, didn't stop at second but raced to the unguarded bag with the tying run.

The White Sox sent Pinchhitter Larry Rosenthal to bat for Bob Kennedy and after Haynes had a count of two strikes and a ball on Rosenthal, Bucky Harry suddenly went strategic. He called on Joe Krakauskas and was rewarded when Krakky shoved a fast ball past Rosenthal for a third strike.

Krakky's success, however, ended at that point. He walked Kreevich to fill the bases, and the tying run crossed the plate while Ferrell was engaged in throwing out Joe Kuhel on a high bounder in front of the plate.

Taft Wright, another former Nat, provided the deciding blow. It wasn't much of a hit—a looping Texas leaguer over third base—but it was enough to send Dietrich home from third with the winning run.

Back in the seventh inning, the Nats had broken a 5-5 tie by scoring on a pair of singles by Gelbert and Ferrell, and Case's infield out.

The Nats made 12 hits, the White Sox 15.

A See-Saw Affair

Three times in the first three innings the Nats went in front and three times they lost their leads. When Walter Masterson began pitching runs back at the White Sox faster than the Nats could get them back, Harris called in Joe Haynes, who met with no immediate success, but steadied nicely.

Washington came up with a run in the first inning, but the Nats were none too happy about that. They were hot on the scent of a big inning when Gee Walker grounded into a double play with the bases full. George Case opened the inning with a hit and Lewis drew a walk. Zeke Bonura finally got the run home with a single to center.

The White Sox bounced right back to knock Masterson loose from two runs after he walked Kreevich. Joe Kuhel rifled a triple into the right-field corner and Taft Wright moved Kuhel home with a single to left.

The Nats procured a 3-2 lead for Masterson with two runs in the second. Gelbert singled to center, and with one out Masterson walked. George Case moved a home run home with a single to center, and Masterson scored from third when Kuhel loafed on his throw to the plate after catching Walker's foul pop.

Masterson pitched the tying run right back to the White Sox in the second inning on singles by Tresh, Smith and Kreevich, but the Nats went in front, 4-3, in the third.

Manchester, Vt., June 26.—Eastern and Midwestern delegations in the National Collegiate A. A. Golf Championships made impressive strides in the rain today as 32 representatives from 25 widely scattered institutions survived the opening match play on Ewanok's drenched Green Mountain course.

Louisiana State, which qualified five competitors yesterday when it tied Princeton for the team championship, returned three victors, two of whom were located in the upper half of the draw. Princeton, Georgetown, Duke, Illinois and Iowa State each contributed two winners.

Virginia Places One

The other colleges with single representatives in the competition for the throne vacated by Tulane's graduated Vince D'Antoni, who was crowned at Des Moines last year, were Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Swarthmore, Union and Baltimore for the East; Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State, Northwestern, Wisconsin and Notre Dame for the Midwest; Virginia and Mississippi in the South, and Southern California, Stanford and the University of California at Los Angeles for the Far West

Final Inning Rally Breaks Up Pitching Duel; Finney Stars

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 26.—Boston's Red Sox cut the Detroit Tigers down, 3 to 1, today, a three-run rally in the ninth inning breaking up a pitching duel between Rookie John Gorsica, of Detroit, and young Jim Bagby, of Boston.

For eight innings Gorsica limited the Sox to three scattered hits and allowed only five men to reach first base. His teammates touched Bagby in the seventh, when Charley Gehringer singled, reached second as Lou Finney fumbled and scored on Hank Greenberg's single.

In the Boston ninth Finney, who smacked two doubles and a single to continue his batting streak, led off with a double. Jimmie Foxx got a scratch single, and Finney came home with the tying run when Jim Tabor singled.

Bobby Doerr forced Foxx at third, then Manager Joe Cronin rapped a sharp grounder past Bartell, scoring Tabor. Catcher Johnny Peacock was given an intentional pass to fill the bases, and Alton Benton replaced Gorsica on the mound. He fanned Relief Pitcher Herb Hash but the third strike got away from Birdie Tebbetts and Doerr scored.

Giants Beat Cards in 10th On Pinch Hit

By the Associated Press

New York, June 26.—The first hit of the year for John McCarthy was a pinch single with the bases loaded in the tenth inning tonight and gave the New York Giants a 10 to 9 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in one of the wildest baseball carnivals of the season.

Thirteen runs were crowded into a tremendous seventh inning, when the Cardinals came from behind with 7 runs and the Giants rallied right back with 6.

During the long contest five pitchers went into action for St. Louis, giving up 18 hits, and New York used three to parcel out 13 blows. Harry Gumbert was the winner, with three scoreless innings of relief service.

There were five home runs in the course of the battle.

Red Ruffing Beats Indians For Yanks, 3-1

New York Takes First Victory in 5 Games After Pitching Duel

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 26.—The New York Yankees salvaged a victory today in the final game of their disastrous Western swing as Red Ruffing bested Mel Harder in a hurling duel for a 3-to-1 decision over the Cleveland Indians.

The triumph was the first in five games for the world champions and lifted them back into the American League's first division. It gave them a record of four won and nine lost in their trip through the West.

Ruffing and Harder each allowed six hits, Harder giving nothing more potent than three singles until the ninth. But he lost the game by giving two to Joe DiMaggio at crucial spots and had to be relieved by Al Smith with two out in the ninth.

DiMaggio drove in all of New York's runs. In the fourth frame Harder had a fit of wildness, hitting one batsman and walking another before DiMaggio shot a sharp single to center to score both. In the ninth Frank Crosetti doubled and DiMaggio again singled him home and after George Selkirk also singled, Harder was removed.

Ruffing kept his hits scattered better. He allowed two in only one inning, the sixth, when a walk and singles by Beau Bell and Ben Chapman accounted for Cleveland's run. Ruffing also walked Ray Mack to fill the bases, but forced Ken Keltner to fly out to end the inning.

The Indians' first place margin of 2½ games over the Detroit Tigers was not affected because the Tigers also were beaten.

Frank Pytlak, the stubborn little Cleveland catcher, who left the team ten days ago with the announcement that he was ill and probably would play no more this season, returned during the day and was immediately installed in the line-up. Pytlak said his personal physician had told him he was all right.

POVICH

Chicago, June 26.—When the revolting Cleveland Ball Club presented its "fire Vitt!" demands, it was suggested in other quarters that Owner Alva Bradley keep Manager Vitt and fire his ball players. However, that was too much to expect. A pretty good ball team, intact, is an enormously valuable property. One is not to be easily replaced.

Here in Chicago, South Side fans and the White Sox management are still struggling to recover from the wholesale discharge of a good ball team 20 years ago. Conservatively, a million dollars has been poured into the player market, but the White Sox owners have been unable to come up with a ball team that has had even a faint pennant chance. The late Charley Comiskey's preference for going noble after the 1919 Black Sox scandal has already set White Sox baseball back 20 years.

He had the best club in the league back there in 1919 and even in 1920, a year after they had thrown the World Series to the Cincinnati Reds, but when he learned the facts of that scandalous act, Comiskey didn't trifle. He fired the whole kit and kaboodle of offenders and even tried to put them behind bars.

They were eight of his regular ballplayers—all of his infield except Eddie Collins and Catcher Ray Schalk; two of his regular outfields, and two of his best pitchers. But Comiskey, who must have known that he was stripping his club of talent that he couldn't replace for perhaps most of a half million dollars, wasn't concerned about that. He had helped found the American League along with Clark Griffith and Ban Johnson, and he was wildly incensed that a team of his would create such a blot on baseball's name. He was indeed the old Roman of baseball.

He fired Outfielders Joe Jackson and Hap Felsch; First Baseman Chick Gandil, Third Baseman Buck Weaver, Shortstop Swede Risberg, Pitchers Eddie Cicotte and Lefty Williams, and a utility infielder named Mullins. Without a whimper, he demanded they be chucked out of baseball for life.

The Black Sox escaped punishment for their sins for nearly a year, you remember. It wasn't until September of the 1920 season that their act of throwing the 1919 series to Cincinnati was exposed. But that delay wasn't Comiskey's fault. He had his suspicions about the guilty ball players even during the World Series.

At the end of the second game of the 1919 series, Comiskey heard from friends by telegraph in various parts of the country that the gamblers were laying strange odds against the White Sox. The loss of the first two games aroused his own suspicions, but he did not go directly to League President Ban Johnson, with whom he had broken years before despite their once warm friendship. He went instead to John Heydler, president of the National League, and displayed his telegrams.

Comiskey's suspicions were relayed to Ban Johnson by Heydler, but Johnson refused to take any action. He was now a bitter enemy of Comiskey and to Heydler he characterized the White Sox owner's complaints as "the yelp of a whipped cur." Thus Comiskey's demand for an investigation was rebuffed.

The White Sox owner took matters into his own hands the next season. He became suspicious again when his White Sox appeared to be tossing off the pennant to Cleveland. They lost three straight games to Cleveland and then, against the Yankees who were fighting Cleveland for the league lead, they took three straight. Comiskey heard that the Black Sox were betting on Cleveland.

He asked Manager Kid Gleason to help with the investigation. Gleason singled out Eddie Cicotte as the weakling of the gang, and from Cicotte Comiskey's attorneys wrung a confession of the 1919 plot. Joe Jackson also confessed and then asked for police protection against other and tougher Black Sox who were in the gang. Comiskey's first act after Cicotte's confession was to suspend eight regular players.

That World Series might never have been thrown, perhaps, had not Red Faber, who had won two World Series games against the Giants in 1917, come up with a sore arm in the last month of the season. The gamblers knew they could not reach Faber. But with him out of it, the White Sox were vulnerable.

Faced with the task of assembling a new team in 1921, Comiskey paid $100,000 for three Salt Lake players, notably First Baseman Earl Sheely. He paid $100,000 to San Francisco for Willie Kamm. He paid $126,000 in cash and players for Bill Cissel. Through the succeeding years Comiskey and his son, who followed him into the ownership of the White Sox, poured hundreds of thousands into talent. But it was not until 16 years after the scandal that the White Sox could come up with a first-division club. What we are trying to say is that it's a slow process.

Seymour Greenberg Springs Surprise, Joe Hunt Survives

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., June 26.—Seymour Greenberg, of Northwestern University, scored a surprise third round victory over William "Billy" Gillespie, of Miami University, today as the field in the National intercollegiate tennis championships narrowed to 16 players.

Gillespie, seeded seventh, was quickly raced off the court by Greenberg, champion of the Big Ten, 6—1, 6—1. He was unseeded.

The other seeded favorites, led by Joe Hunt, of Navy; Don McNeill, Kenyon, and Frank Guernsey, of Rice Institute; kept in the running. The tourney start was delayed for two days by rain.

Advances By Default

McNeill, favored to add the college crown to his national clay court title, advanced by default from Walter Mead, of Oklahoma, then conquered Ed. Kilgus, of Pennsylvania, 6—3, 6—3.

Hunt, a member of the Davis Cup team last year had to play three matches. He beat Peter Shonk, of Williams, 6—2, 6—0; Lawrence Krieger, of Yale 6—3, 6—2; and Robert Curtis, of Rice, 6—0, 6—2.

Guernsey, the defending champion, swept aside Cliff Owen, of West Chester (Pa.) Teachers, 6—2, 6—2, and Robert Low, of Stanford, 6—1, 6—1.

Dutch Clark Signs With Rams for 3 Years

Cleveland, June 26 (AP).—Earl (Dutch) Clark has signed a three-year contract to coach the Cleveland Rams of the National Professional Football League, the club said today.

Clark, whose home is Pueblo, Colo., was an all-America back at Colorado College and played and coached the Detroit Lions before taking over as pilot of the Rams last season. The Rams started slowly last fall, but won four and tied another of their last six games.

Parker to Head East's Tennis Team

Pittsburgh, June 26 (AP).—Frankie Parker, seeded the Nation's No. 2 player and member of three Davis Cup teams, will represent the East East in the opening singles match of the 51-year-old East-West tennis matches at the Allegheny Country Club Friday.

Walter L. Pate, nonplaying captain of the East team, said Parker was "definite" as a starter, but added that final workouts Thursday would determine whether Archie Henderson, of the University of North Carolina, considered by many fans as Parker's equal; Hank Prusoff, former Seattle businessman, or Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., would play in the second singles matches.

'Softie' Stars Go Through Drills Today for Stadium Feature

2d Workout Slated at Edgewood

Brewers, Looking To Action in Finale Of Red Cross Show, Plan Line-up Changes

By Bill Burnett

Though his men have each played two league games already this week, Vic Baratte, selector and coach of the all-star softball outfit which tangles with Senate Beer Saturday at Griffith Stadium, will send them through an additional drill tonight at Edgewood Playground at 6 p. m.

It will be the teams' second workout together, and the final practice before the big clash. The squad next gets together Saturday at 2 p. m. to launch a double-header sandlot bill for the benefit of the Red Cross. With Griffith Stadium donated to the cause by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, and umpires, coaches and players contributing their services without charge, few expenses will result and all proceeds are to go diectly into the Red Cross war fund.

Of particular interest during the "softie" workout today will be the practice hurling of slender "Bump" Simonds, the 18-year-old who has been assigned the starting mound berth. Gene Adams, of Iad's team, or Bob Williams, of Ryan's Tavern ten, will be his backstop.

Other softball luminaries expected at Edgewood today: Infielders George Larrick, Jerry Zanalotti, Hank Brostek, Johnny White and Frankie Fara; Outfielders Charlie Frank, Billy Richardson, Jake Rosenbloom and Eldred Cox, and Pitchers Harry Dodson and Hal Steffis.

From the baseball portion of the double session, in which the D. C. champion Heurich Brewers meet The Washington Post's All-District Schoolboy team an hour after the opening of softball hostilities, came word yesterday that the Brewers were considering several line-up changes for the contest.

George Knepley, Maryland University third baseman, will be in a Brewer uniform for the first time, but possibly at some other infield post than his regular one. Dick Knight rightfielder who has batted sixth recently, may be moved up to the lead-off spot, and Ellett Cabell dropped from second to sixth. Clean-up hitter will still be Huck Stahl, the brewmaster captain of the club, and easily the most dangerous hit-maker of the lot.

Tickets, priced at 50 cents for all seats, may be purchased at Lowe & Campbell and Atlas sports goods stores and in The Washington Post sports department. Sandlot ballplayers may purchase the pasteboards from their managers or league heads.

Potomac Boatmen Now Plan W. B. C. Unit for Youngsters

Rowing Club Finds Interest Soaring; Arrangements Made for Inter-City Regatta

By Al Hailey

First it was rowing for the members, then for wives and guests, and now come plans for setting up a Boys Club of Washington rowing unit at the Potomac Boat Club, it was revealed yesterday.

Charles Fyfe, of the Boys Clubs, has informed boat club members that eight or ten boys from the Georgetown Clubs are ready and eager to accept the Potomac Club's offer to conduct a course of instruction in rowing an crew racing.

In conjunction with the plan for a Boys Club unit, the boat club is conducting a drive to interest recent high school graduates and boys still in high school in the sport.

Picking Up Fast

"Interest in rowing is picking up this year more than we ever dreamed of, and it is our hope to increase this interest by furnishing a wholesome athletic pursuit for youngsters just out of school who don't exactly know what to do with themselves over the summer," Norman D. Marden, captain, in charge of the club's waterfront activities, said.

It was primarily to meet a need furnished by the "graduation" of youths from the ranks of the Boys Clubs at age 18 that the boat club has undertaken its newest campaign.

Plans for the new venture were disclosed yesterday as members turned out at their boathouse just above Key Bridge to work for their first big regatta of the season—the seventy-first Inter-City Regatta with clubs from Baltimore, Alexandria and Richmond Sunday afternoon on the Potomac.

Choppy waters and a strong wind out of the southwest failed to perturb the oarsmen as they set out under the watchful eye of "Coach" Marden.

Gigs Hold Interest

Main attention yesterday was devoted to work with the four-oared gig, manned by Coxswain Jerry Stovall, 1940 graduate of Wilson High School, in his first baptism of crew racing; Paul Lanigan, stroke; Edmund Mason, No. 3; Ernie Millar, No. 2, and Joseph O'Brien in the bow.

This crew will go to Philadelphia July 4 to compete in the People's Regatta on the Schuylkill River, and Lanigan, 1938 Middle States single scull champion, will compete in the scull event, also.

Outlook Bright

With $400 worth of new equipment this year, the Potomac Club is looking forward to a bigger season than ever starting Sunday, President George A. Hernan, said.

The Sunday program will include a demonstration of canoeing by the "ladies class," a special unit of wives and guests of members who are taking up rowing this year with an eye to inter-club competition next season.

The Inter-City, or "Southern Conference" meet Sunday brings together crews of the Arundel Club, of Baltimore; Old Dominion, of Alexandria, and the Potomac Club, starting at 1 p. m.

Fleischer Named Dempsey Referee

Atlanta, June 26 (AP).—Selection of Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, as referee for the Jack Dempsey-Cowboy Luttrell fight here July 1 was announced today.

Promoter Jim Downing said also that it had been finally agreed that the bout would be at ten rounds, with 6-ounce gloves.

This match between the 45-year-old, long-retired former heavyweight champion and the little-known wrestler grew out of a "feud" started by brushes between the two while Dempsey was refereeing some of Luttrell's wrestling sessions.

Rizzo Stars As Phils Split With Pirates

Pittsburgh Wins Second, 11-6; Phils Take Opener, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 26.—Johnny Rizzo got six hits in seven times at bat—including a homer, triple and double—to give the Phillies an even split in a doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates today before a ladies day crowd of 12,585.

The Phils won the opener, 4 to 2, with Rizzo knocking in all four runs. The Pirates took the afterpiece 11 to 6, behind Mace Brown's fine relief pitching. Brown relieved Truett Sewell in the sixth and yielded only two hits in the last four innings.

Rizzo, who came to the Phils 10 days ago in the deal that sent Morrie Arnovich to Cincinnati, won the first game with a two-run homer in the eighth inning. Cy Blanton held the Pirates to seven hits, one a homer by Vince DiMaggio, to win his first game for the Phils.

Browns Bow Out of 1st Division, 9-4

Chapman Leads A's To Victory With Perfect Bat Record

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 26.—Philadelphia's Athletics tumbled the St. Louis Browns out of the first division perch they gained only last night, by defeating them today, 9 to 4.

Sam Chapman with five hits—one a base cleaning home run in the second inning—drove in five of the scores and had a perfect day at bat. His homer was No. 7 for the season.

Dick Siebert of the A's also had a perfect day with four hits in four official times at bat and drove in two runs. But while Siebert walked once, Chapman connected safely each time he strode to the plate.

And George Caster, the pitcher, with one victory and 11 defeats prior to today, held the slugging Browns to seven hits although he issued six walks. One of the St. Louis safeties was Walter Judnich's tenth home run of the year.

Nats Defeated By Chisox, 7-6

They went to considerable difficulty to get the run off Bill Dietrich, Smith's successor. Travis opened the inning with a double to left and scored on Gelbert's double to right. The Nats filled the bases thereafter on walks to Ferrell and Pinchhitter Al Evans, but George Case hit into a double play.

The Sox greeted Haynes in the third inning with a three-hit attack that fetched two runs and a 5-4 lead for Chicago. Appling doubled to left, McNair singled to left, and Tresh doubled to right. Tresh helped Haynes out of trouble by trying to stretch his blow to a triple and falling victim to Bloodworth's relay of Lewis' throw.

Under the strangest circumstances the Nats tied the score at 5-5 in the fourth. They didn't get a hit. But the White Sox obligingly tossed four errors into the inning. With one out, Kennedy muffed Walker's grounder. As Walker made a delayed start for second, Dietrich threw the ball into center field and Walker reached third. Walker scored on Bonura's smash into the box which resulted in an infield out. A bit later in the inning, Eric McNair made two errors on the same ground ball. He fumbled Bloodworth's grounder and then threw it over Kuhel's head, but Dietrich escaped further damage when Ferrell grounded out with the bases full.

Dulie, Carrying a $10.20 Ticket, Wins at Charles Town Track

Duchess Del Runs Second, Palkin Third

Hernandez Brings Winner Home 3 Lengths Ahead of Field in Feature

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 26.—Should the Government desire to move that pile of gold from Fort Knox, Ky., I recommend that it assign the task to Dulie, a 5-year-old gelding owned by C. M. Feltner, of Berryville, Va. Handicapper Fred Burton gave Dulie 125 pounds today, consisting of Jockey John Hernandez and enough lead to make up the difference. This was in an effort to make the Gabe Murphy Handicap a close race.

Despite the fact that the contest was over the long mile and an eighth caurse, Dulie handled the weight as if it were a bag of feathers and bounded to the imaginary wire three lengths in advance of his nearest rival in a field of five. The crowd of 6,000 did not believe Dulie, regardless of his fine record, was equal to the task of carrying the load. Thus shunned by some of the heavy money, Dulie paid $10.20.

Duchess Del Second

R. A. Yowe's Duchess Del was second, two lengths in front of J. E. Murphy's Palkin. The only other starters, R. E. McConnell's Tristenagh and Mrs. M. Reis' Sunny Rose, were far back, but looked so close that the judges referred to the photo before awarding fourth money of $50.

Palkin took the lead in the opening jumps and Jockey Hernandez elected to steady Dulie along close to him. Duchess Del was well up at this stage, with Tristenagh and Sunny Rose battling for last position, just as they were at the finish. On the backstretch Hernandez clucked to Dulie and the gelding wore down Palkin to open a good lead. Palkin dropped back and Duchess Del took up the chase, Jockey W. Kirk gave the Duchess a good whipping, but she was not in Dulie's class.

Longshots Score

The longshot players had their innings in the early stages of the program. It seemed against the law for a horse to pay less than 10 to 1. Sail By, a horse that Vesseli rode in her previous race, found new life under the handling of Jockey R. Haber, while Vesseli, on the heavily played Happy Hostess ,could not get in the money. Sail By paid $28.60.

The daily double brought a return of $214.20, the third day in a row that the twin wager has gone to telephone numbers. Vee Eight started the ball rolling in the second race by winning at a $28 mutuel, defeating, among others, Justa Jimmie and Lapis. Grouchy put the finishing touches on the transaction by winning the third event and paid $21.60 in her own right.

Jockey Douglas West was thrown hard when Frank H. stumbled and unseated him directly after the break of the fourth race. He was sent to the Charles Town Hospital for observation.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMNEY ROYAL, $8.20, $4.00, $3.60; WAM, $3.60, $3.00; SEA BOY, $4.00.

ROMNEY ROYAL took command at once, saved ground and withstood long drive to come again after being headed. WAM came to contention with rush early, challenged repeatedly on outside of leader, took brief lead in midstretch and weakened. SEA BOY was made much use of to reach serious contention early and weakened after racing with leaders on outside. ROCK MISS was well placed early and was held safe. FRANK H. stumbled and lost rider directly after start.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:27½. Off 4:28. Winner, C. M. Feltner's ch. g. (5), by Dunlin—Julie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 1:54.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DULIE, $10.20, $3.60, $2.40; DUCHESS DEL, $3.80, $2.20; PALKIN, $2.60.

DULIE, closest to pace of PALKIN from start while rated, assumed command when placed to drive and drew out gradually under strong handling. DUCHESS DEL was hard ridden and was held safe while under pressure in final eighth. PALKIN set good pace while saving ground, but could not stay in closing test. TRISTENAGH showed little speed at any stage. SUNNY ROSE moved up menacingly and then dropped back.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $600; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57½. Off at once. Winner, J. T. Harris' ch. f. (4), by Time Maker—Dunworkin'. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $450; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME HER, $10.00, $5.20, $3.00; CAIDON, $5.60, $3.20; PROSIT, $2.60.

TIME HER, off in first flight, took command early, was kept to hard drive and was not seriously menaced. CAIDON lacked early speed, came between horses entering stretch and closed willingly. PROSIT raced wide and weakened in final stages. LITTLE HARPIST closed some ground from slow beginning. REGAL SUN had early speed and faltered. BUTTERMAN was taken up leaving gate and failed to rally.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, SLOW.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:21½. Off 5:23. Winner, E. A. Stone's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAY ARNOLD, $24.40, $7.20, $3.80; ABBOT'S LARK, $3.60, $2.80; HIGH AIM, $4.40.

BAY ARNOLD, allowed to settle into stride, improved position gradually on outside, responded willingly when placed to drive and wore down ABBOT'S LARK to be up in concluding stride. ABBOT'S LARK disposed of REGAL FROLIC while setting pace, drew out and barely failed to last. She bled in the race. HIGH AIM was unable to keep up early and rallied mildly. BUBBLEWORTH went in first flight to stretch and weakened. ROUGE CATALAN was well placed early and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place easily. Went to post 5:51. Off at once. Winner, G. P. Bill Bennings — At the Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The voice that introduces those broadcasts from Charles Town is that of Bob Longstreet of WFMD. Well, I gave the Benningites a good start yesterday with a $28.60 winner. I wish I could do it in every race. Cy Butler has returned. West Sea, a winner at Deleware Park, to this track. A. S. Hewitt has sold Repeat to P. C. Randolph. L. C. Leith has shipped Milray and Bad Dreams back to the farm. In addition to pulling up lame, Prince Turley bled in yesterday's first race and has been placed on the veterinarians' list which probably means he is through for the meeting. Harold Bestor, vice president of the Hagerstown Fair Meeting, which follows this, was a visitor. He has many horses coming in from Delaware Park, which closes July 4. What's the story on M. O. being an assistant steward for morning hours only? Those initials don't stand for Millie O, either. C. E. Sloan has sold Cream Cheese to J. Quinn. The horse has been running almost as bad as the name implies. D. L. Watts has sent his Swift Air and Swift Charlie to Cleveland. Yesterday's feature was named for Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University. In the first race there was a horse named Georgetown, but Gabe crossed them up on the hunch by playing Sail By, the long shot winner. Chuck Frost tells us that R. Zindorf, of Annapolis, owns Mariyah, a winner here the other day. Through a mixup in the papers the owner was listed as S. W. Labrot, jr. Was there or wasn't there an angle to that first race yesterday? See you on the rail. BILL.

First Race—Clay Hill has tossed the boy and has ran off on two occasions. If this one gets off without mishap, I look for a set of brackets. Ginseng breaks off the rail and has plenty of speed. Mr. Jim is fast but is a doubtful starter.

Second Race—Stubbs may forget to run out this time and take down a purse in a field of this sort. He has the speed of this party. Rocky Mount ran away with a recent field and is dangerous. Blue Prelude has been close consistently and is a threat.

Third Race—Geodesian is on the reserve list but is good now and should not be overlooked. Of the eligibles, I prefer Depinard. Gay Jack is promised a good rider and should be in the thick of the contention. The Bennings' stable Patchpocket will be doing his best, which I'm afraid will not be enough.

Fourth Race—Royal Veil had a rough trip last out and was crying to run while blocked off entering the stretch. With clear sailing this one should take it all. Nay Nay is ready for the best. Locomotive, with a change of riders, is a possibility.

Fifth Race—Din gets the best of the weights in this field and needs only the right handling. Tavern is in comparatively light and thus rigged deserves attention. Remolee's last was a beaut.

Sixth Race—Miss Maker had trouble in her last and is reaching top form. Seems capable of handling these due to a most weight assignment. Schley Goree likes the route and could be close despite 118 pounds. Nob to take care of the others.

Seventh Race—National has been known to go this long route and gets a good post position. May go to the front and stay there. Salburne has shown enough to warrant a high ranking in this company. Kai-min to take care of the show award.

Eighth Race—Never Idol seems better suited at this mile and an eighth. Gets only steadying weight and I'm going to string along. Dian is good and won with this rider. Chalotaur, a doubtful starter, might take it all if sent postward.

Substitute Races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Roving Eye, Counora and Man At Arms. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Hurdy Gurdy, Netia Wood and Vitascope.

Best Bet—Din.

ENGLISH FOXHOUND

As his name indicates this fellow was bred in England to hunt the fox in the old English custom of "Riding to Hounds." Just when he came into being is problematical but he has been known for several centuries. He is heavier and bulkier than our American Foxhound and may be any hound color or combination. Indian River 'Chase Is Won By Straw Boss

Stoddard Ace Scores A Brilliant Triumph, Shattering Record

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Del., June 26.—Mrs. L. E. Stoddard, jr.'s Straw Boss moved to the front rank of the country's steeplechase division here today when he raced to a sparkling triumph in the third running of the rich Indian River Steeplechase Handicap, third race and feature event.

Picking up 137 pounds, the chestnut gelded son of Carlaris and Enid, safely negotiated the 16 difficult jumps on the exacting 2½ miles stakes course in the record shattering time of 4:50 1-5, clipping four full seconds off the old mark established by Warsprite in 4:54 1-5.

Straw Boss' new record was made over a soggy, heavy course, made so by a heavy downpour of rain which swept the course shortly before the afternoon's sport began.

More than 6,500 fans, many of them enthusiastic devotees of the steeplechase sport, saw Straw Boss race to victory. His score was worth $7,550 to Mrs. Stoddard and increased his earnings for the current year to $8,550.

The nearest pursuit of the Stoddard colorbearer at the finish line was Rokeby Stable's veteran lepper, Good Chance, but he was a well beaten runner-up, finishing four lengths to the rear of the flying winner. F. Ambrose Clark's Bachelor Philip, victor in last week's rich Georgetown Steeplechase, was third, two and a half lengths back of Good Chance and a head better than Frozen North a stablemate of the place horse.

The Indian River attracted nine starters and all but Rioter and Drinthorn completed the difficult journey. Rioter fell at the eighth hedge and Drinthorn came a cropper at the eleventh hedge. Their riders escaped injury. The winner paid $15.70 for $2.

George Vass Wins Medal in District Junior Golf

Par on 18th Tops Mrstik By a Stroke

Wind Soars Scores As Kenwood Member Wins Medal With 75; Burgess Is Third

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent

George Vass dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the seventeenth hole and made a 10-footer for a par on the eighteenth to win medal honors by a stroke in the qualifying round of the District Junior championship yesterday at Woodmont. The medalist's score was a six-over par 75.

The 17-year-old junior member of the Kenwood Club, who won the 16-17-year age class trophy in the Maryland Junior championship Tuesday in Baltimore, needed the sub-par finish for Buster Mrstik, of Capital, was already in with a 76.

Vass thus takes over the favorite's role, for he was runner-up in this tournament last year and was finalist in the recent scholastic championship. The 17-year-old medalist graduated from Western High School last week.

The boys scored way over expectations as the high winds made several of Woodmont's par four holes good par fives. Ed Kilby and Jim Anderson played off the last place in the championship flight with 91's, Kilby winning with a par four on the second hole after they halved the first in double bogey sixes.

Mrstik, with 37-39, 76, trailed Vass' 37-38, 75 by a single stroke. Third and the only other 80-breaker was Dick Burgess, of Army and Navy, who was out in one over par 36 but he played the last six holes in seven over perfect figures for a 77.

Bob Donohue also had a good out nine, 37, and parred the first two holes coming back but here he hit a string of fives and sixes and finished with a 44 for an 81. James Brantley, Chevy Chase, was next with 82 while Bill Cassedy, Blair High second-baseman from Argyle and Graham Ellis, of Army and Navy tied with 83's.

Vass went one over par on five holes in his medal-winning round, and ran into a big six on the long par four fifteenth. His birdie on the seventeenth was his first of the day and then with the wind sweeping across the eighteenth hard enough to blow the cup out of the hole, Vass calmly knocked in a 10-footer for the medal.

The first two rounds of match play are scheduled today in the tournament for the junior club members who have not reached their eighteenth birthday. Tomorrow's semifinals and finals will decide the winner of the Albert MacKenzie trophy. Vass meets Bill Brownrigg, Indian Spring, in the first round while the outstanding match is likely to be between Mrstik and Arthur Myers, 15-year-old Manor golfer.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Many anglers are using light whippy rods with six and nine-thread linen line for their bay fishing, and having lots of fun, but even so they are not giving the fish the 50-50 chance they so often talk about for it is extremely unlikely that even the largest hardheads could break either line. We think an even chance would mean there was as much of a possibility that the fish would get loose as there is of the angler bringing him in.

To bring that about we believe the line can not have a breaking strength over the average weight of the fish. In hardhead fishing the average weight is about 2½ pounds, which brings you down to No. 24 cotton thread, and back to our pet idea that cotton thread means more fishing fun in this area than in any other manner.

Don't get the mistaken idea that because the thread will snap in your hands with only a slight tug it will do likewise with a 3-pound hardhead on the end of it. True, that it isn't possible to set the hook in the usual bay manner of other years, or to bring your quarry in the hand-over-fist manner of an excited youngster. And you're not going to bring in catches that count up in the hundreds, but spend from three to 10 minutes on each fish—see it rise to the surface and run like any deepsea gamester, always just a hair from the breaking strength of the thread—and freedom.

Some anglers will advance the theory that cotton thread, unlike linen, will, when wet, lose some of its strength. Which is true, but it doesn't lose as much as linen gains, and not enough to worry about.

As a test we wound 100 yards of No. 24, that has been rolling around our tackle box for more than a year, on a small reel the beginning of this season. It has had fish slime on it, been caught on oyster shells countless times, been left undried on the reel, and is still seemingly as strong as the day it was put on and without losing a single lead.

We don't try to shove it down anyone's throat, or even ask you to try it if you think you are having as much fun as it is possible to get on other tackle, but when you find the hardheads are not supplying the same thrills they did early in the season, give it a trial. Bend on a spool and see if a line gauged to their ability to fight doesn't bring back the pleasure of early season fishing.

Since last Thursday, the tides at Tall Timbers have not been adequate to supply the current that is necessary to break the small crabs loose from the holes and crevices in the rocks, and upon which the big stripers feed.

There are several things contributing to this condition, but which it is needless to talk about. When the current strengthens again, the big fellows will be back.

In the meantime, they aren't doing so bad over on the Eastern Shore. Buck Stevenson at Oxford is consistently bringing them in. The same is true of Capt. Randolph Harrison at Tilghman's, who reports from 10 to 75 every day, and Annapolis boats are having better than good rockfishing by the chumming method in the mouth of Eastern Bay.

Dropkick Misses—Sexton Loses Mat Bout to Dusek

After planting approximately 2½ dropkicks into various portions of Ernie Dusek's anatomy, Frank Sexton missed the second half of his finale and fell victim to Ernie in 39 minutes, 30 seconds of the feature match of last night's rassle show at Riverside Stadium.

Frank was tossed out of the ring to the customers in the ringside, few as they were—approximately 450 all told, no less than seven times.

Lolo Lopez upheld the glory of old Spain, which she claims as home, by tossing Doris Dean around with hair pulls and punches to here and there to win in 11 minutes and 14 seconds with a body press. In the preliminaries Rudy Dusek and Warren Bockwinkel drew, Abe Yourist disposed of Ed White in 12 minutes, 35 seconds, and Ed Newman defeated Ralph Garibaldi in 15 minutes, 30 seconds.

Miss Parsons Wins Girls' Tennis Title

16-Year-Old Wilson Senior Triumphs Over Ann Powell

By Anne Hagner

Margot Parsons, 16-year-old Woodrow Wilson High School senior, won the City of Washington girls' tennis tournament title yesterday when she defeated Ann Powell, 6—2, 6—2, on the Friends School courts.

Tiny Miss Parsons, playing a fast game that had her opponent running all over the landscape, added the District crown to the Hawaiian girls' championship, which she won there several seasons ago.

Miss Powell, Friends' star, was unable to keep up with the pace set by her rapid rival, although she turned in a fully creditable performance. Spectators feared that she was bothered by a bad wrist that nearly kept her out of the tournament altogether, but she said afterward that it was giving her no trouble at all.

In the doubles finals, the smooth-working combination of Ruth Johnson and Gargery Snowden worked hard for a victory over Betty Jacob and Ann Cullen, 1—6, 6—4, 6—4. Competition was fairly slow in the early stages, but the quartet warmed up rapidly, and in the final few moments the score was deuced three times before Miss Johnson added on Miss Cullen's error. For the match point, Miss Cullen drove the service over the base line to give the set to the opposition.

Miss Cullen fared better in the consolation singles final, however, when she defeated Mirian Kreiselman, 6—1, 6—2. Trophies were awarded to winners and runners-up by A. K. Tigrett, former president of the District Tennis Association.

CONSOLATION SINGLES—Ann Cullen defeated Miriam Kreiselman, 6—1, 6—2.
GIRLS' SINGLES—Margot Parsons defeated Ann Powell, 6—2, 6—2.
DOUBLES—Ruth Johnson and Margery Snowden defeated Betty Jacob and Ann Cullen, 1—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Turner's Rassles Benefit Camp Fund Tonight

Gino Martinelli and Dropkick Murphy will fight to a finish tonight, once the "battle royal" featuring almost half a ton of groan artists is over, in Promoter Joe Turner's benefit wrestling show at his Fourteenth and W streets arena.

Zim Zam Zum, the Irish Angel, Juan Olaguival, Al Norcus and John Bognar—that's the line-up for the battle royal, in which anything goes. Billy Metro will referee this business.

In the semiwindup, Matros Kirilenko takes on Michele Leone and Karol Krauser meets Felix Slovikowski in a special 30-minute skit. A portion of the gate receipts will be used to help defray the expenses of sending 200 underprivileged children to summer camps.

1939 Grid Staff at A. U. Intact, Chancellor Says

The same grid coaching staff which held the reins at American University last year will again be in power during the 1940 season, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Joseph M. Gray, chancellor of the university.

Warren Berl, of Stanford, last year's defeated finalist, found himself out of the tourney when Lee Ramsel, of Louisiana State, gained a 1-up victory by chipping into the eighteenth cup after both had failed to reach the green in three.

Burke Rallies

Johnny Burke, of Georgetown, the 1938 champion, lost three of the first five holes to John Leidy, of Michigan, before regaining his fine putting touch. Two down at the turn, Burke wound up with a 4-and-3 victory by winning the last six holes with par performances.

Billy Shea, Georgetown graduate who won every match in the Eastern League season, was upset in the first round by Alex Welsh, of Illinois, 3 and 1.

Three of the other qualifiers were 1939 quarter-finalists, and all of them—Bert McDowell, of Louisiana State; Bill Hall, of Iowa State, and "Skip" Alexander, of Duke—gained the State round as easily as favorites should.

4 Play Overtime

Four of the survivors had to play overtime to subdue their opposition. They were Bill Cordingley, of Harvard; Ray Higgins, of Georgetown; Guy Berner, of Duke, and Tom Hoak, of Iowa State, who was carried to the fifth extra hole before he could regain the early one-hole lead he surrendered to Gene Durant, of Ohio State, by three-putting the fourteenth green.

Durant forged to the front for the first time at the fifteenth but Hoak evened matters with a par-four on the seventeenth and then won the match by playing the twenty-third in similar fashion.

Cordingley had to play the day's best golf to eliminate Bill Ransom, of Southern California. Both had medals of 73, three over par, and the Harvard captain's regulation four on the first extra hole was the clincher.

Contract Bridge

F. L. S. was pleased when a false-card fooled his opponent, an intercollegiate pair champion of 1939. F. L. S.'s tossing of a queen induced a favorable shift which allowed him to make his five-spade contract.

He writes: "West was an old friend of mine, C. R. W., intercollegiate pair champion from Cornell in '39. My partner was a Columbia University Club team player (I also went to Columbia.)"

"I was pleased at my success in fooling the enemy. The diamond king was opened; I threw the queen, so West shifted to a club, having the heart king-jack. On the club king and queen I threw two diamonds to complete my ruse, and finessed the spades, which succeeded, drew trumps, ran the spades. The opponents each saved a heart for the last trick, so I made my fourth diamond, winning six-odd when I was expecting to go down one, as West, though not holding higher than five and four of diamonds, would have played high-low and won a ruff if diamonds had been continued."

Henry Cites U. S.-Canada Rail Hookup

D. C. Official Stresses Interdependence at Montreal Parley

Railroads of the United States and Canada have a common part in the task of safeguarding North America, Robert S. Henry, of Washington, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads, yesterday told his organization's protective section in convention at the Windsor Hotel in Montreal, Canada.

MR. HENRY

United States lines own and operates railroads in Canada. Railroads on both sides of the border freely use short-cuts for their lines across the territory of the other nation . . ."

The unity of the railroads of the two countries goes further, Mr. Henry continued. American and Canadian railroads make joint through rates, and joint through arrangements of all sorts, with standard equipment, completely interchangeable.

Other key speakers at yesterday's session included K. P. Aldrich, of Washington, chief inspector of the United States Postoffice Department.

Commodities Trend Mixed On Peace Talk

Wheat Higher, Corn Off; Cotton Gains 95 Cents; Copper Weakens

By the Associated Press

Confused price patterns in the big commodity futures markets yesterday mirrored the nervous attitude created by the European news.

Peace rumors, a difficult to pin down as quicksilver, played a part in market action.

Wheat at Chicago closed unchanged to ⅝ of a cent a bushel higher after fluctuating within a 1 cent range. Even the crop news was contradictory. Corn ended unchanged to ½ cent lower.

Rubber recovered nearly ½ cent a pound of Tuesday's severe setback and domestic sugar moved ahead briskly in late dealings. Other steples higher included hides, cottonseed oil and Santos coffee.

Wheat Rises Moderately

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—Shaking off an early decline, wheat prices today closed unchanged to ⅝ cent higher.

Buying support came from mills and traders who heeded reports of less promising yields and poorer quality of late maturing new wheat in the Southwest. The market rallied around midsession to as much as 1⅜ cents over the early lows. July closed at 78⅛-78 and September at 78¾-½.

Corn closed unchanged to ½ lower, July 60⅞, September 59; oats, ⅜-½ higher; rye, ⅛-½ higher, and lard 5-8 higher.

Developments that attracted attention to traders included rumors of a possible early truce in Europe and the statement of former President Hoover that he had communicated with Germany, Great Britain and the Belgian refugee government regarding possible third party aid in relief work in Europe.

Scarcity Lifts Cotton Prices

New York, June 26 (AP).—The strong position of the July cotton delivery influenced support for the rest of the list today and prices advanced 6 to 19 points.

Holders of the spot month turned thumbs down on buying offers except at a considerable mark-up from overnight prices. Reluctance to sell was sharpened following Tuesday's decline because of continued reports from the South telling of scarcity of spot cotton.

'Cost Plus' Profit Formula Immobilizes Management

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
A Special Correspondent.

EMOTIONAL economics, rather than a sense of realism, is conditioning legislation relating to corporate profits in time of war and national preparedness.

It is perfectly legitimate to want to close the avenues to profiteering out of human misery incidental to war.

The cost of capital, which may be described as a quasi wage payment for the use of tools and other assets, is one of the five principal categories of corporate cost.

The other four include the tax cost, the cost of goods and services purchased from others, the cost incidental to the wearing out and going out of date of tools (depreciation and obsolescence) and the cost of hiring men (wages and salaries).

Thus, if cost were properly defined, there would be no justification for resuming the "cost plus 10 per cent" contracts of the last war.

FIRMS COULD accept instead contracts at cost, including a proper return on capital as a part of cost.

The "cost plus" idea is faulty because it immobilizes management from its primary duty of seeking a return for owners through fighting costs.

Realists in corporate affairs know that the new defense program will be costly, and that to an increasing extent companies will have to act as indirect tax collectors for the Government.

Yet they are hopeful that new tax schemes will be scientific in concept and will be administered with a minimum of friction.

TREASURERS of companies are confused as to what the effect of the rejected La Follette formula would have been on conditions in their own enterprises. Since it would have been piled up on top of the existing peacetime excess profits tax, which is itself based on guesswork, they feel that it would make for further confusion. The formula is based on arbitrary concepts.

But business knows that the bill must be paid, and that a new and additional excess profits tax seems inevitable. In the circumstances, many prefer the Canadian principle of basing the excess profits tax on profits in excess of the average earnings in the three previous years.

The problem is intricate and involved, and should be dealt with after thorough hearings, instead of being rushed through.

The Market

Stocks Continue Downward Trend; 'War Babies' Decline Laid to G. O. P. Nonparticipation Plank; Packard Up

New York, June 26.—Continuation today of the selling movement in stocks which materially extended Tuesday's declines, placed financial markets definitely in the secondary stage of a reaction, according to the chartists. This appraisal, in turn, raised the question as to whether stocks are discounting something more than war's developments—peace for example, or an unfavorable turn to domestic politics?

In any case there was a general softness in evidence on share markets for most of the day. Mild rallies toward the end of the day were regarded principally as evidence of evening up and readjustments after two days on the down grade.

War stocks took the brunt of losses, notably the aircraft division which again established a low for the year; the equipments, including companies engaged on tank and shell steel production; metal and mining, and a number of the merchandising shares which could benefit from Government orders.

The composite average of 100 stocks ended 0.41 point down after having been behind 0.79 at the worst stage. Volume of 634,900 shares was about the same as on Tuesday. Of the 687 individual issues traded 387 closed lower against 129 which advanced and 171 ending unchanged.

From the peace viewpoint, it was also conceivable that the new emphasis placed on non-participation by the United States in world affairs, reported to have been incorporated in the Republican platform against sturdy efforts of Senator George W. Pepper, gave discouragement to traders. New rumors of cooperative steps being taken by some of the Republican groups to block the nomination of Mr. Willkie.

Mr. Willkie's reported strength was another thing which may have discouraged trading, more particularly from the investment buying angle.

Packard Motors was prominent among active issues following reports that the company might receive the contract for 8,000 Rolls-Royce motors for the United States and British governments. Ford had refused the contract because British needs were involved.

Loft was again the active leader, regaining a point of recent losses. United Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright and Lockheed were heavily traded at lower prices, all recording new lows for the year or longer. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem ended small fractions behind after recovering from early dips. The Iron Age pointed out that current steel output, around 88 per cent of the capacity, was almost entirely without benefit of national defense orders.

Losses of a point or more occurred in Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Kennecott Copper and Westinghouse. American Telephone and Standard Oil of New Jersey firmed. Utilities closed about unchanged and were the firmest group. Food shares lost quite some ground. Rails were generally steady, aided by reports of substantial gains over a year ago in May and five-month earnings figures.

Bonds Drift Lower

Listed bonds drifted lower in an idle market today, all groups of issues being affected by the prevailing pessimism as to European affairs and their possible repercussions upon the United States. Securities of the belligerent countries were generally soft, and Latin-Americans joined the downswing, notwithstanding the fantastic Administration scheme for a commodity control corporation embracing the American republics as a whole. United States Treasury bonds were fractionally lower. Corporate issues here followed the lead of the equities section. Turnover was $4,600,000.

A little buying interest appeared in a few German and Italy bonds, but most issues even of these countries lost ground. French 7s were not traded, but Australian and Canadians dipped. Belgian, Norwegian and Danish bonds turned uncertain. Latin-Americans were marked lower, with some of the recessions rather violent. Argentine and Uruguayan bonds weakened more than others.

United States Treasury obligations receded by small fractions, both in formal trading and in the counter market. Telephone debentures reflected some inquiry, but best grade power and light, railroad and industrial bonds slowly gave way. Bankers refrained from making final arrangements for fresh corporate flotations.

Speculative railroad bonds comprised the most active group, but the trend was lower in most instances. Forecasts of additional rail business were overshadowed by the European news. Other speculative groups also were dull.

Foreign Markets

London, June 26 (AP).—Losses were general in the securities market today. Chief depressants were the Prime Minister's statement regarding disposal of the French fleet and the French Indo-China question. Markdowns were again described as "precautionary" because actual selling was limited.

British government bonds lost as much as ¾ point. Foreign bonds lower included Japanese, Rumanian and Brazilian. Domestic rails countered the main trend. Industrials worked down over a broad front and commodity stocks weakened.

Liverpool—Cotton futures declined 4 to 15 points, with distant deliveries at minimum levels. Weakness of overseas markets encouraged liquidation.

Foreign-Owned Assets in U. S. Face Seizure

5 Billions in Loans To Nazi-Invaded Nations at Stake

By the Associated Press

New York, June 26.—The United States may have to face the question of seizing foreign-owned assets here to protect more than $5,000,000,000 in loans to countries invaded by the Nazi forces in Europe, banking sources said today.

Mainly in doubt, it was noted, is the $4,160,000,000 France owes the United States on World War debt account.

The United States' chances of collecting on the war debt, banking circles observed, obviously would be remote since a victorious Germany would have a first mortgage on France for any claims to reparations the Nazi regime might make in the final settlement.

Approximately $600,000,000 in bank balances and long-term investments in the United States have been frozen under the Washington order to prevent French assets from falling into Nazi hands. In addition, a substantial amount of French gold has been tied up.

Altogether, informed quarters estimated, well upwards of $2,000,000,000 in bank deposits, gold and other assets of France, the Netherlands, Denmark, Belgium and Norway have been frozen here under Government order pending the clearing of the European situation.

Undetermined amounts of privately-owned securities—placed by some sources at several billions—also were said to be in the United States for safekeeping for individuals, institutions and governments of countries which have come under the Nazi heel.

May Take Over Assets

A leading Wall street banker, who declined to be quoted directly, said he believed the United States must consider taking over part of these assets to prevent them from being used by Germany in the event the Nazis consolidate their hold on the conquered countries.

Some withdrawals were being made from frozen accounts under licenses issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

But the bulk of the immense wealth lay idle in an unprecedented blackout of financial and trade relations with continental Europe.

Transport Halts, Steel Scrap Price Drops 50 Cents

Pittsburgh, June 26 (AP).—The long rising price curve for steel scrap dipped today when sales of No. 1 heavy melting scrap were made at $20.50 a ton, a reduction of 50 cents. The present range is $20 to $20.50.

Hesitancy developed in the scrap market when the French armistice raised the problem of disposing of French iron and steel contracts. Since then the British purchasing commission announced such contracts would be taken over by England.

Weighing heavily on the scrap market, steel circles said, was an estimated 250,000 tons of scrap metal originally headed for Italy but tied up in Atlantic Seaboard ports by transportation difficulties.

Added to this supply, which will have to be resold, dealers said, were about 400,000 tons of iron and steel products destined for the Balkans, Italy and Scandinavian countries. Much of this metal was on the high seas bound for foreign ports when Germany's lightning war success caused the ships to return to United States ports.

Cotton Subsidy Date Extended to Oct. 31

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department yesterday extended the time for exporting cotton sold under its subsidy program from July 31 to October 31 and the time for exporting cotton products from October 31 to November 30.

Secretary Wallace said war conditions in Europe, lack of cargo space and disrupted shipping schedules had delayed actual export of part of the cotton and cotton products involved. About 400,000 bales in the form of cotton or cotton products remain to be exported, he said.

Commodity Markets To Close Saturdays

New York, June 26 (AP).—All markets of Commodity Exchange, Incorporated—rubber, hides, silk and metal futures—will close Saturdays for ten weeks beginning July 6 and continuing through September 7, it was announced today.

Action of the exchange leaves only the cotton market and the securities exchanges operating locally on Saturday during July and August. Markets followed a similar schedule last year.

New Equipment Seen Needed to Meet U. S. Defense Program

Philadelphia, June 26 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad today announced plans for purchase of approximately $10,000,000 worth of new equipment to meet anticipated increased service demands resulting from the national defense program.

Most of the sum will be spent for 2,570 units of new steel freight equipment, designed for carrying a wide variety of industrial products. Purchase of two high-speed steam passenger locomotives and eight passenger cars also is planned.

In announcing authorization of the program by the board of directors, President Martin W. Clement said orders for the equipment will be placed later.

N. & W. to Spend $8,000,000

Roanoke, Va., June 26 (AP).—The Norfolk & Western Railway announced today that it would proceed immediately with an improvement program which involves an expenditure of approximately $8,000,000.

The proposed outlay is in addition to the $20,000,000 expenditure for additions and betterments during 1940, which was announced at the beginning of the year.

Vacuum-Cleaner Sales Set Record

Cleveland, June 26 (AP).—Sale of 173,896 household vacuum cleaners in May established an all-time record for the month, C. G. Frantz, executive secretary of the Vacuum Cleaner Manufacturers' Association, announced today.

The May figure compared with 170,209 in April and 114,377 in May, 1939, and played a large part in piling up the second-largest January-May total in the industry's history. Five-month sales of 786,775 were exceeded only by 835,398 the same period of 1937.

Boston Wool

Boston, June 26 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Trading was very slow today on the Boston wool market. Most grades were not receiving enough demand to test quotations. Good French combing lengths, fine territory wools, in original bags, were selling occasionally in small quantities at around 85-86 cents, scoured basis. Orders for country-packed three-eighths and one-quarter blood, bright fleece wools, were mostly at 39-40 cents, in the grease, delivered to users, and scattered carload lots were available to fill these orders.

Today's Radio Highlights

Detailed timings of the convention floor broadcasts continue in a flux, but those indicated in the log below are promised. From noon on, WJSV will offer two-minute summaries every hour on the hour.

12:15, WRC—How may men and women best serve their country during this crucial period? Mrs. Roosevelt has found that her recent mail has stressed this question and during her program this afternoon will discuss some possible answers.

1, WMAL—Margaret Culkin Banning, celebrated for her stories, lectures and civic suggestions, commences a weekly series. Says Mrs. Banning: "I like being a citizen, a writer and a mother, in that order. I like almost everything that comes my way, except wars." Today she is heard from delegate-filled Philadelphia on "Civic Preparedness."

7, WRC—Ours is a great city for the fortune tellers and fortune listeners. Mr. District Attorney looks into this matter, one which he and not we classifies as a "racket."

7, WMAL—One of the reasons for the undoubted decline of the Metropolitan Opera's reputation lies in such stuff as this. Winifred Heidt, soprano, and Gordon Gifford, baritone, both recently awarded contracts with the opera through their success in the Auditions of the Air, join their talents in a duet. The number? "Shine on Harvest Moon." All on Musical Americana.

7:30, WJSV—Madame Hranoush Bey is famed as the proprietress of the Summit, N. J., training camp where top-flight boxers get in trim for the ring. Mme. Bey discusses Tony Galento's training habits on Strange as it Seems.

8, WRC—Walter Donaldson has composed a new song "Song of Mojave," which Dick Powell sings over the air for the first time on Good News. Fannie Brice is also on hand for this one, but don't you think, Miss Brice, that with all the other wonderful people at your command you might give us a respite from the sure-fire Baby Snooks?

Listen!
with Slocum

A strange, unearthly silence pervades the deserted corridors of WJSV's sumptuous Earle Building quarters these days. Gone is the hurly-burly, work-a-day uproar which visitors long have associated with Columbia's Washington sweatshop.

Gone is the stenatorian roar of the slave drivers whipping the serfs through their daily paces. Silent is the machine-gun staccato of the typewriters.

In the stead of all this, a pastoral quiet hangs lightly in the perfume-laden atmosphere which filters in through what the technicians laughingly refer to as the cooling system.

All nature lovers would feel a pull at their heart-strings, were they to be granted the magic power to see what is going on in the deserted publicity office. Hundreds of tiny, velvet-footed mice are scampering through the huge piles of dust-laden papers atop the sturdy old desk, searching bewilderedly for the succulent little morsels of fragrant cheese and wienerschnitzel which great-hearted "Boss" Slocum used to share with them from his noon-day repast. But, alas, he too has gone—gone to face the lethal adjectivial hail in the great campaign at the Quaker City's Convention Hall.

Laughing or crying, knitting or sitting, but one thought occupies the minds of the proletariat on the home front—"May the great siege soon end, and may our loved ones come home triumphant before Christmas!" By Proxy J. W. H.

Court Refuses To Stop Union From Picketing

Trial Ordered to Determine If Group Is Liable for Damages

Justice James W. Morris, of the District Court, yesterday refused to prevent the teamsters union from picketing a restaurant which bought ice from a company at odds with the union.

Justice Morris, howeverñ refused to dismiss two damage suits against the union, which resulted from the picketing, and ordered a trial to determine whether the union's activities made it liable for damages under the antitrust laws.

Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Local Union, 639, and four of its officers were named defendants in suits by the Consolidated Terminal Corporation, Eleventh and E streets southwest, and Bernard Singer, proprietor of Singer Lafayette Restaurant, 1621 H street northwest.

The complaints said that the corporation's employes belonged to no union and that there was no controversy in the plant. However, the complaints said, the teamsters union tried to force the corporation to require its employes to join the union and undertook to picket both the corporation and its customers.

One of these customers was Singer, who had a contract to buy ice from the corporation. His complaint said that teamster union pickets patrolled in front of his restaurant with signs proclaiming that he used ice unfair to the union. Both suits asked for injunctions and for treble damages.

Justice Morris found that the circumstances constituted a labor dispute and that, therefore, the court was forbidden to grant an injunction by the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

In refusing to dismiss the complaints altogether, the court remarked that the right of free speech must not be abused.

"The right to publicize the facts concerning a labor dispute," said the opinion, "carries with it an obligation of self-restraint to prevent the publication of untruth."

A false charge of unfairness to labor, said the court, would certainly be damaging and would be subject to the libel laws.

Railroad Adjustment Board Rulings Denounced as 'Unjust'

Decisions of the National Railroad Adjustment Board were denounced as "unjust and inequitable" yesterday, before the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Proceedure, holding hearings in the United Stites Court of Appeals.

Speaking in bebhalf of the railroads, John Dickinson, general solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, declared the present procedure of the N. R. A. B. resulted in decisions requiring the railroads to pay for work not done, and to pay more than once for work done.

He recommended the following changes in procedure: requiring of full statements of the case to the board, with opportunity for the other party to reply; setting of a "reasonable" time limit for back pay claims; permission for parties in the case to be heard by the referee making the decision; preservation of the evidence presented; publication of the opinions giving the basis of awards; judical review of the board decisions.

Today, beginning at 10 a. m., the attorney general's committee will hear criticism of the Federal Communications Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Social Security Board, Veterans Administration, Maritime Commission, and Alcohol Tax Unit.

Handicaps weren't allowed to be stumbling blocks for the Monday Evening Sewing Class of seven workers at Goodwill Industries.

When the class gathers, one set of statistics lists three victims of infantile paralysis, one victim of spastic paralysis, one young woman who has lost a leg, a girl who is totally deaf and a woman suffering with nervous debility.

But the class has managed to achieve another more cheerful type of statistics, too. Since it was organized in October the members have made, renovated, repaired or remade an average of five garments apiece.

The one young man in the class dropped out—or, rather, "up." As a result of the skill gained in the sewing class and in the garment department at Goodwill Industries, 1718 New Hampshire avenue, he got a better job, mending clothes in a dry cleaning establishment.

Mrs. Blanch Riddle, supervisor of the garment department at the industries, started the class as a volunteer service project on her part. Because of the young handicapped workers' serious problem of maintenance, she hopes thus to help them add to their wages or to earn their own living at home, if they should become unable to go out to work.

While preparing to earn more money, they have made savings for themselves. For instance, a coat, with $3 worth of material plus the work of the maker, would have cost $16 if purchased readymade, Mrs. Riddle pointed out.

Already members of the class have begun to capitalize on their new skill. Over the week-end, one made a dress which she sold for $3, while another did $5 worth of remodeling for a customer.

They would make faster headway with their work, if they had a portable electric sewing machine, it was pointed out. Several are unable to use their feet to run a regular machine.
